U.S. Navy Pilots Reach Hawaii; Set New World Massed Flight Record

Perfect Formation Kept Through Darkness Over Pacific.

Honolulu, Jan. 11 (AP).—The greatest overseas mass flight in aviation history was completed with clocklike precision here today as six American Navy planes carrying 30 men on a swift 2,400-mile "routine" transfer from California to Hawaii alighted at Pearl Harbor in perfect order.

All Honolulu roared with the din of welcome as the big planes loomed out of the Northeast, thundered past Koko Head, then over Diamond Head and the glittering sands of Waikiki, down to the gentle waters of Pearl Harbor.

The over-all elapsed time of the planes in the air was 26 hours and 11 minutes, but the flying time from the Golden Gate across the perilous stretch of the Pacific to Pearl Harbor was 24 hours and 45 minutes, official time.

Arrive in Precision.

The first plane, carrying Lieut. Comdr. Knefler McGinnis, in charge of the flight, knifed the waters of Pearl Harbor at 5:39 p. m. (Eastern standard time), and came to rest one minute later. At 6:01 p. m. plane No. 2 landed. They came down with the military rythm of a squad of Annapolis midshipmen on parade.

They had trouble with fog and darkness, but came through with certainty. And it was not their first swift victory over distance. A few months ago they flew in formation from Norfolk, Va., to Coco Solo, Panama, and thence to San Diego, Colif.

A quick move to San Francisco preceded their epochal flight to Hawaii, where they will be stationed permanently.

In many respects this aerial Odyssey differed from the overseas flights of the past. Outstanding was the virtual absence of fear for the safety of the 30 participating.

No Anxiety Felt.

There were no expressions of anxiety from relatives; no speculation on whether the gasoline supplies would hold out; no fear that the navigators would shoot wide of their goal.

Edsel Ford, slim and somewhat dapper son of Henry Ford, appeared before Senate investigators yesterday in the role of bank director, but succeeded in remembering very little of his official activities.

Among the few specific bits of information that the Senators were able to elicit from the witness, after frequent huddles between Ford and his attorney, Louis Colombo, were:

The Ford Motor Co. had $32,500,000 on deposit in Detroit Guardian group banks at the time they closed. Ford told newspapermen later that up to date his com-

Small Lines Reveal Bar To Air Mail

'Big Three' Got Favors; Lindbergh Offers to Testify.

Delving further into alleged irregularities in the award of air mail contracts, Senate investigators yesterday heard how independent lines not members of the "Big Three," were not allowed to bid for contracts, how the office files of one of the "Big Three" were altered to omit reference to former Postmaster General Brown, and how many prominent directors of a large airline had been heavy contributors to Republican campaign funds.

According to Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee investigating ocean and air-mail contracts, the "Big Three," composing what he termed the "aviation trust," include the Aviation Corporation of Delaware, United Aircraft and Transport Corporation and North American Airways Corporation.

C. E. Woolman, former operator of the Delta Air Line, told the committee he had been forced to sell out to American Airways, after assurance by Brown he would be taken care of even though he could not get an air-mail contract.

"Expedient" to Sell.

"I sold out, not because I wanted to, but as an expedient," said Woolman, a ruddy-faced Texan.

He added he could not qualify technically under the night flying rule because his was a passenger line. The qualification of six months' flying experience is not contained in the law granting contracts.

"I couldn't compete with a line carrying mail," concluded Woolman. "So I sold out. Of course, I would have preferred to keep on as an operator."

Theodore Taney, another independent operator and former president of Pittsburgh Airways, told the committee the contract awarded to the Transcontinental and Western Air cost the Government $1,670,000 a year more than his company's bid would have cost.

D. M. Sheaffer, official of the Pennsylvania Railroad and American Airways, testified, with some confusion, about the altered memorandum.

Memo Suggested Merger.

Black introduced in evidence a carbon copy of a memorandum Sheaffer wrote to his executive committee, in which he said: "Brown could and would award a contract to the Transcontinental Air Transport, provided the line arranged a merger with the Western Air Express." This came from the personal files of Sheaffer.

Another document, a photostatic copy from the company's files, omitted this reference to Brown. Both were dated July 15, 1930.

"One was a correction of the other," explained Sheaffer.

'Down With the Thieves' Crowds Shout as Cabinet Totters.

High Officials Assailed as Responsible in Bank Scandal.

Paris, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—The most serious rioting in years broke out tonight in the vicinity of Parliament as violent thousands jammed the boulevards leading to the Chamber of Deputies, where the government of Premier Camille Chautemps fought against overthrow on charges growing out of the collapse of the Credit Municipal in Bayonne.

Royalist mobs, aided by hundreds of other opponents of the government, broke through barricades in the darkness and battled police. Scores were badly beaten and trampled as the police charged the rioting mass of humanity, wielding their clubs freely in hand-to-hand fighting.

Panic in the mob followed explosion by hundreds of police reinforcements of blank torpedoes as they charged the crowds in Boulevard St. Germain, center of the worst fighting.

French Revolution Recalled.

The mob tore up iron railings, grills and small trees to hurl at the gendarmes and Republican Guards. The market in Boulevard Raspail was torn up and the avenue strewn with produce.

Wild scenes reminiscent of the French Revolution were enacted in the dim light of street lamps. The crowd of men, women and children was so dense as to make almost impossible the famous cavalry charges of the guards.

Disorder continued late into the night in the radius of a mile around the Chamber of Deputies. Hundreds were arrested. The riots were the worst since the protest demonstration against the executions of Sacco and Vanzetti in the United States.

In the Chamber, Premier Chautemps stoutly defended his government. Speaking without notes, the premier answered interruptions and questions shot at him from the opposition benches without hesitation.

Republican Guards Active.

"I promise fullest punishment of the guilty and reorganization of the police," the premier said. "I warn the country of the danger of any alternatives, as revealed by the recently discovered plot to establish a directory.

The reference was to an alleged plot discovered three days ago to distribute millions of posters inciting the public to demand institution of a "directoire," similar to the directory that followed the French Revolution and led to the rise of Napoleon more than a century ago.

As the deputies adjourned the mob continued pressing against police lines outside, shouting "Down with the thieves!"

To prevent further rioting close to Parliament, gendarmes placed barricades of motor trucks across bridges and streets leading to the chamber. Republican Guards with fixed bayonets marched around the building.

Deputies Blame High Officials.

Paris, Jan. 11 (AP).—The ghost of the alleged swindler, Serge Stavisky, shook official France tonight as the Chamber of Deputies heatedly debated his $40,000,000 pawnshop bond scandal and Premier Camille Chautemps defended the cabinet's life against charges of widespread corruption.

A dozen interpellations about the alleged "protection" enjoyed by the late Bayonne pawnshop founder in his financial schemes were listed by all political groups for hearing before the premier could ask a vote of confidence on his efforts to prosecute those guilty in the Stavisky affair.

The Socialist Deputies Lagrange and Monnet dragged the political and financial scandals of the last ten years before their fellow legislators. They said "generals, diplomats and prefects" were members of various boards of the Stavisky enterprises.

Referring to reports in the chamber that the Corsican police chief, Chiappe, might be asked to resign, Monnet declared "If the chief of the police of Paris had ample reports on Stavisky, why wasn't Stavisky stopped in time?"

Chiappe was said to have been the last to have appeared with Stavisky in public.

House Votes Gag Rule On Supply Measures, Blocking Restored Pay

Roosevelt Wins First Major Test With Five-Ballot Margin.

G. O. P. Members Applaud Revolt

Amendments on Floor to Economy Clauses Prohibited.

By a slender margin of five votes, the House late yesterday adopted a drastic gag rule policy for all supply bills, which has the effect of "going along with the President" in his proposal to continue a 10 per cent Federal pay cut in 1935 and other Administration economy measures.

The Administration victory, achieved after three hours of acrimonious debate resulted in 84 Democrats deserting the ranks to vote with the opposition, finally was won by a vote of 197 to 192.

It was an unexpectedly close call for President Roosevelt, who, in a letter read to the House by Chairman Buchanan of the Appropriations Committee, expressed the hope that Congress "will enact the legislative economy provisions referred to in my budget message."

Floor Amendments Banned.

The test of strength came on a ruse presented by Chairman Pou of the Rules Committee, placing in order without amendments, other than committee ones, economy provisions of the independent offices appropriation bill, now before the House.

While the outcome sets a policy for all appropriation bills of the present session, its principal effect was to consent to the President's proposal to restore only one-third of the 15 per cent Federal pay cut, beginning July 1.

President Roosevelt's letter asserted a survey of the cost of living did not justify restoration of the entire pay reduction.

Republican Leader Snell, of New York, led the attack on the gag rule, declaring it "the most vicious and far-reaching ever brought before Congress." Other Republicans, joined by Democrats and Farmer-Labor members, assailed the rule, and there was a rumble of jeers along the opposition benches when Majority Leader Byrns closed the debate with a plea that "this is no time to desert our President."

G. O. P. Applauds Revolt.

The debate produced the unusual spectacle of Democrats attacking one of their own party measures, while Republicans applauded.

The gag rule, preventing amendments to the economy provisions of the offices bill, was denounced as 'Hitlerism" by Representative Hoep-

Bootleg Tests as Best Liquor; Morgenthau Serves It, Speeds Drive to Bolster Legal Stock

U.S. Seeks Curb on Illicit Whisky by Lifting Ban on Imports.

The Government yesterday speeded its drive to break the hold of the bootlegger on the liquor trade and to insure a supply of good liquor at reasonable prices.

Secretary Morgenthau, serving both good and bad liquor at his press conference, revealed this as the purpose behind lifting the restriction on importation of American-type whisky for 30 days and per-

Sterilization Custom Bared In Michigan

Hundreds of Defectives Operated On, Says Physician.

Detroit, Jan. 11 (AP).—Charges that a number of patients at the Wayne County Home for Mental Defectives had been sterilized over their objections resulted today in an order for an investigation, and brought out the fact that hundreds of sterilization operations have been performed in Michigan institutions under a State law enacted four years ago.

Auditor Edward H. Williams laid the charges before the board of county auditors. In reply, Dr. Robert H. Haskell, superintendent of the county home, said that 61 operations have been performed on inmates in the county school, and all were carried out on petition of the patients' families.

Dr. Haskell said that 842 sterilization operations had been performed at the Michigan Home and Training School, at Lapeer, up to last May 31. The law also is invoked frequently in State asylums, he said.

Williams said his information was that "the rights of the individual and their parents were wantonly violated," and compared the practice to the much publicized enforcement of the sterilization law in Germany.

He said he had been informed that a social worker for the training school had induced some of the parents of inmates to give consent for sterilization operations by rep-

Police Bribe Verdict Today; Counsel Clash

Defense Pleads "Framed;" "Higher Up" Mystery Power Hinted.

The case against two Metropolitan policemen, accused of having accepted a bribe from a bootlegger, will be decided today by the Police Trial Board, which recessed yesterday after Attorney Harry T. Whalen pleaded for acquittal on grounds the defendants had been "framed."

Intimations that a high official, who outranked a Senator, was the power behind the prosecution of Policeman H. G. Bauer and Rudolph Schleichert, were made by Bauer, but the identity of the alleged persecutor went unrevealed.

During the cross-examination of Bauer by Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, Mr. Whalen said the line of questioning might embarass a high official, and he moved the board go into executive session.

"Let Bombs Fly."

"I have no desire to protect anyone," said Seal.

"If there's any bombshell to flop, let it burst," remarked Inspector O. T. Davis, chairman of the board.

"Mr. Seal," Whelan retorted, "you were mighty generous to protect the names of two Senators and this person might even outrank a Senator."

He referred to two Senators to whom Alfred H. Dudley said he made deliveries of whisky in the Senate Office Building.

After a conference between Seal and Whelan it was decided not to continue this questioning because, it developed, Bauer had no tangible evidence that the mysterious person had persecuted him. It was only an opinion he expressed.

Both Bauer and Schleichert asserted they had been "framed" because they were investigating the

Lindbergh Offers Facts on Finances

Wires Senator Black He Will Come "Any Time."

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh sent a telegram today to Senator Hugo L. Black, chairman of a Senate committee investigating air mail contracts, saying he would be willing to testify at any time about his aviation financial transactions.

"You are now in possession of a complete record of my financial transactions in relation to aviation," the telegram said. "If there is any question regarding these transactions, I am available at any time to clarify them."

The committee was told yesterday that Lindbergh had been given $250,000 worth of stock in Transcontinental Air Transport while he was associated with the company in a technical capacity.

Rio Floods Kill 3; Train Wrecked

High Toll Reported From Heavy Rainfall.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 11 (AP).—Three deaths and extensive property damage resulted today in this section from one of the heaviest rainstorms in years.

Two persons were killed in a train wreck attributed to the storm, and a boy drowned in a swollen stream.

Many suburban streets were flooded and street cars were halted. Hundreds of automobiles and buses were stalled.

Pilot and 4 Killed In Italian Crackup

Gar Wood Unhurt In Plane Mishap

Speedboat Racer, Piloting Craft, Noses Over.

Algonac, Mich., Jan. 11 (AP).—Gar Wood, speedboat pilot and holder of the Harmsworth Trophy, escaped injury today when his airplane nosed over while he was landing at the airport at Marysville, between Algonac and Port Huron.

Wood was piloting the plane and was alone in the ship.

As he taxied the ship over the field the wheels struck a puddle and went through the ice coating. The impact caused the ship to nose over, breaking the propeller.

Senate Lifts Default Tax, Bans Loans

By Franklin Waltman, jr.

Assuming the role of a jumping jack, the Senate yesterday reversed its action of Wednesday imposing increased taxes on liquor from nations defaulting on war debts, and then turned around and passed a bill making it unlawful for such countries to obtain any loans whatever in the United States.

But within two hours of this latter action, Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson served notice he would move to reconsider the passage of that bill. It appeared tonight that again he would be able to rally his forces and beat back this second attempt within two days to penalize nations defaulting on their war debts.

The explanation for this performance is that a majority of the Senate feels bitter about the nonpayment of war debts and thinks something should be done to show their feelings, but leaders do not want anything done which would restrict President Roosevelt's handling of the matter as he deems wise.

As soon as the Senate convened,

Wagner Leads First Threat To Roosevelt

Democratic Stalwart Splits Away on Major Issue of Waterway.

By Raymond Clapper.

The first major threat of defeat to confront President Roosevelt on Capitol Hill has come from inside the Democratic family under the leadership of one of the Administration's most effective lieutenants, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York.

He is out, with a fair chance of success apparently, to kill the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence deep waterway treaty, which Mr. Roosevelt has just asked the Senate to ratify for "broad national reasons."

Debate may begin in the Senate today. Late yesterday the treaty was made the unfinished executive business. Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was ready to open the discussion with a set speech, championing the project to open up a path for oceangoing ships which would reach 1,200 miles inland to the head of the Great Lakes.

Because economic ramifications of this project are so vast and because so many communities thousands of miles from the St. Lawrence region would be affected, some favorable and some adversely,

2 Suspects Killed When Deputy Is Slugged and Car Crashes

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.). An escape attempt by two suspects being brought here by automobile today cost both their lives and caused probably fatal injuries to Deputy Sheriff Richard Renner, of Hagerstown.

The dead men were identified as Clyde Mallott, 22, of Needmore, Pa., and Orval M. Oliver, 23, of Gloucester, Ohio.

Both men were killed when Renner was struck on the head and lost control of the car, which crashed into a pole. The officer is in the Washington County Hospital here with internal and head injuries.

The sheriff's office this morning received a call from Hancock that Mallott, wanted in Pennsylvania on numerous charges, had been identified as he passed through in an automobile. The sheriff was asked to stop and hold the pair.

Renner, alone, saw the car sought, stopped it and arrested Oliver. He took the pair in his own machine and started for Hagerstown. After passing a small settlement 2 miles west of here, he said one of them struck him over the head with a wrench. The machine crashed into a pole and was demolished. Lyman Bostetter heard the crash and found both suspects dead.

Identity of the men was not known for several hours after the accident. Mallott, who served two terms in the Huntingdon (Pa.) Reformatory and was charged with automobile thefts and robbery in this county, has been sought since last November, when he escaped from the Bedford (Pa.) Jail.

Homes of Reich Clergy Raided

Berlin, Jan. 11 (AP).—A long-standing and bitter German Protestant Church fight over leadership and dogma took a dramatic turn this evening when Prussian secret police invaded homes of members of the Pastors Emergency Federation in various parts of Prussia and confiscated membership lists.

Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, meanwhile, was summoned by President Paul Von Hindenburg's office, but apparently no agreement was reached.

The weekly organ of the Nazi German Christians, who support Bishop Mueller, today demanded the state intervene.

In a new peace effort, Dr Mueller today summoned church leaders to submit proposals for reconstructing the Protestant cabinet.

Lips of a Gunman Can't Touch Mine!

Dentist's Assistant Loses $3 and Consciousness.

New York, Jan. 11 (U.P.).—A nurse in a dentist's office fainted when one of four gunmen attempted to kiss her in the course of a holdup.

She is Miss Sylvia Rubin, 21, assistant to Dr. Bernard Link, 30, of Brooklyn. She was forced to give up $3 to a gunman, who said:

"Gee, but she's pretty. I guess I'll kiss her."

Accused Blackmailer of King Wins Right to Cite Royal Blood

London, Jan. 11 (AP).—A 43-year-old unemployed engineer boldly stepped up to the solicitor's table in historic Old Bailey Court today, told the judge he had proof he was the nephew of King George, and won the right to subpena witnesses in his fight against a charge of attempting to blackmail his majesty.

Justice Charles said he would not go into the matter of ancestry for the moment, but gave permission for the issuing of subpenas to witnesses, who the defendant, Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, said would testify his mother was secretly married to the Duke of Clarence, the late elder brother of King George.

The judge warned that it must be proved later that their testimony was relevant, and adjourned the hearing until January 19 or 23.

Haddon will defend himself at the hearing, another chapter in proceedings that opened with his arrest November 29 on the accusation that he wrote letters to the monarch asserting his kinship and asking a $3,000 annual income "with enough ready money to start a modern boarding house."

Haddon's nurse, friend, and fiancee, Miss Helen Murray, who nursed him after a serious operation several months ago, accompanied him to court.

Japanese Fish Bear NRA Sign

Order 4,000 Cases Seized After Finding Eagle on Shipment.

(Associated Press.)

Four thousand cases of Japanese Tuna fish bearing the NRA Blue Eagle insignia were ordered seized yesterday by customs authorities at San Pedro, Calif., pending an investigation.

The order for impounding the shipment was issued by Assistant Secretary Stephen B. Gibbons of the Treasury after an informant had telegraphed that such a shipment had been landed at Terminal Island, San Pedro, from the Japanese ship Tatsuta Maru.

The telegram offered a sworn affadivit to show that each case of the canned fish displayed the Blue Eagle. This insignia, property of the United States Government, may be used in this country only on goods produced under the higher wages and shorter working hours of NRA.

Hugh S. Johnson notified the State Department, and then asked Secretary Morgenthau to order all customs authorities to seize any such shipments pending investigation.

According to the informant's telegram, the shipment was consigned to Samuel Kunin & Sons, Chicago.

Vernon Slater, Harrisonburg, Dies Suddenly

Prominent in Civic Work; Death Follows Attack in Postoffice.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Vernon R. Slater, 63, member of the Harrisonburg Council for 21 years and prominent in civic and fraternal circles, died this morning from an attack of angina pectoris.

He was stricken at the postoffice, but apparently recovered and went to his office. He became ill again and drove home, where he died shortly afterward.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon. Interment will be in Woodbine Cemetery.

Mr. Slater was the oldest member of the council in point of service. He was chairman of the water committee and member of the finance committee, and was largely responsible for the development of Harrisonburg's water system.

Mr. Slater was first elected to council in June, 1912, and planned to be a candidate for reelection in June of this year. He was an unsuccessful candidate for commissioner of revenue in the last general election.

Deputy Overhears Robbers in Cafe; Shoots One, Other Escapes.

Los Angeles, Jan. 11 (AP).—A deputy sheriff who happened to be sitting at a counter was able to save $40,000 in gems today for Emanuel Lipetz, New York diamond salesman, held up by two men in a cafe.

The deputy, A. J. Brown, wounded one of the men and so frightened the other with a second bullet that he dropped the jewel bag before escaping.

As Lipetz rose with his meal check, one man hurriedly preceded him to the cashier's desk. Closely following the salesman, the second man told him "we don't want any trouble—just hand over that satchel with the rocks in it."

Brown heard this as the latter two passed him. The man ahead was telling the cashier to keep still, that they did not want her money. Brown went for his pistol. The man behind Lipetz grabbed the bag and wheeled around with a pistol, Brown said. Brown fired. The man with the bag "ducked" and the bullet struck his companion.

The wounded man said his name was Joa Ruchell.

Austrian Fascists Get New Powers

Dollfuss Surrenders Rule Over Police.

Vienna, Jan. 11 (AP).—Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss surrendered an important part of his executive power to the Fascist Heimwehr tonight when he delegated control of the police and gendarmerie to Vice Chancellor Emil Fey, high ranking home guard leader.

This means an important victory for the Heimwehr, thousands of whose members are taking an active role in Dollfuss' drive against Nazi terriorism, but does not fulfill completely the demands.

The Heimwehr wanted also dissolution of the Socialist party, and appointment of a federal commissioner to control the Socialist government of Vienna.

Drawbridge Rule Topic of Hearing

Meeting Called for Jan 25 on Neals Sound Span.

Public hearings on the feasibility of continuing operation of a drawspan in the highway bridge across Neals Sound, Md., will be held at Rock Point, Md., at 1 p. m., January 25, the War Department announced yesterday.

The Maryland State Roads Commission has requested revocation of the regulations governing the drawspan.

From December, 1932, to October, 1933, the commission has reported, the drawspan was opened only one time. Expense of maintaining an operator and nonuse motivate the commission's request.

recenting that they were signing petitions for release of their children.

"No child has been sterilized at the training school except where application has been made to the court by the family of the child, not by the training school," Dr. Haskell declared. "Everything has been done according to law." The family, he said, was in court when each order was entered.

Of the county home patients sterilized, Dr. Haskell said that 14 were boys and 47 girls. The ratio, he said, was about the same in other State institutions. At the State home, he gave the figures as 197 boys and 645 girls. The disparity, he said, is due to the difference in "risk that the two sexes constitute to the community."

Victim Wins Judgment.

Ages of the patients, he said, probably range from 16 to 20.

A few months ago, a young man in Oceana County, Mich., secured a $3,200 judgment against three county officials whom he charged with inducing him to submit to a sterilization operation.

Senators Told Of Ford Effort To Save Banks

pany had received $11,491,000 of this present loss, leaving a balance of $21,009,000.

Ford personally loaned the Guardian Detroit Co. $1,000,000 in cash and $5,000,000 in securities in 1930 to "help out."

It didn't help.

The Ford Motor Co. bought more than $15,000,000 worth of Government securities for cash on December 31, 1932. Three days later the securities were sold and the company again had its cash. Ford said this was to "show less cash in the annual statement, because they made so much of it in the newspapers if there was a lot of cash."

Pecora Hints Tax Evasion.

When Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, suggested that this year-end transaction might have been to evade the Michigan personal property tax. Ford looked shocked and replied:

"Oh, no. Anyway, there wouldn't have been any tax levied on that cash. At least I understand so."

Then, as the committee members were silent, the witness appealed:

"Am I wrong?"

"You'd better ask Mr. Colombo," advised Pecora.

Which Ford did, and revealed that he had had an opinion from the attorney general of Michigan that the cash would not be subject to tax.

Ford Arrival Causes Sensation.

After the hearing Colombo told Pecora that he would present the attorney general's opinion and two Supreme Court decisions, upholding Ford's contention, at today's session. Colombo explained that the assets were exempt from Michigan State taxation because the company was incorporated in Delaware.

Pecora said he was not entirely satisfied there was not tax liability, and would have his investigators look it up.

Ford's appearance in the committee room caused considerable excitement. Flashlights popped, photographers climbed over each other, and spectators crowded upon the committee table to see the famous son of a famous father.

Frequently brushing imaginary specks from his immaculate dun-colored suit, he quietly repeated his most consistent answer to Pecora's questions:

"I don't recall."

Frequently "Doesn't Remember."

"Were you a regular attendant at the meetings of the advisory committee of the board of directors of the group?" asked Pecora.

"I don't recall."

"Were you active in your discharge of duties as a director?"

"I thought I was. I counseled these men on the bank's policy."

"How much counsel did you give them?"

"I don't recall."

"Were you one of those who suggested what dividend should be declared by unit members of the group?"

"I don't remember," the witness varied his reply.

Duty Was to "Watch Conditions."

Asked what his duties consisted of, Ford said that he was one of those who had to "handle and watch carefully conditions in the country as they went from bad to worse and cope with the situation as it changed.

"We are responsible for scrutinizing the operations of each unit," he added. "I can't remember specifically the things we did."

Pecora brought out that the minute book of the group meetings showed that Ford attended no meetings in 1931.

"It must be true then," said Ford. "I don't recall."

He testified that he loaned the Detroit Guardian Co. the $5,000,000 in securities as collateral for a loan of $4,500,000 from the Bankers Trust of New York. He admitted that he had never gotten the $1,000,000 cash back.

"Ethical? I Suppose Not."

Under insistent questioning by Pecora, Ford admitted the Ford Motor Co. has frequently made temporary deposits over the year-end in various unit banks of the group, "in order to show increased deposits in the annual statement."

"Do you think this was ethical?"

"Why, no. I don't suppose it was."

"Then why did you do it?"

"I don't know."

Pecora concluded the day's hearing with the introduction of long correspondence between the Detroit Guardian National Bank of Commerce and the Guaranty Trust Co. and the Chemical National Bank, both of New York, dealing with details of the transfer of cash into Government securities and back again.

Asked whether Ford's testimony today would be very long, Pecora said:

"I doubt it. He doesn't seem to know a great deal about the situation."

Kenneth McCarren, chairman of the Detroit City Board of Assessors, will be called today to supplement the Ford testimony.

Giving Bankers the Break.

Preceding Ford's testimony, Alfred P. Leyburn, chief National bank examiner, was called upon to explain a ruling from former Comptroller General J. W. Pole that examiners might exercise leniency in appraising bank securities.

Leyburn interpreted Pole's instructions to mean "give the bankers the break" as long as they held good stock and not "cats and dogs." In the latter classification he included promotion mining stock, and other undesirable securities.

Pecora read a telegram from Pole in 1931 in which he suggested that examiners "use every effort to encourage and sustain the morale of bankers."

Leyburn said his office had followed these instructions when they examined the Guardian banks.

Citing banks in Ohio and Indiana that had nearly exhausted their borrowing power and were in a precarious position, Leyburn said that Michigan, in declaring the State bank holiday in February, 1933, "had simply beaten these other States to the draw."

Navy Pilots Reach Honolulu To Set Massed Flight Mark

chief of the United States fleet, wirelessed McGinnis a message of confidence and the flight became what senior officers called a "routine" affair.

Lack of wind delayed the takeoff, however, and four of the planes battled for two hours before they got into the air. Each plane, loaded, weighed about 20,000 pounds.

There were the inevitable fogs through which the adventurous squadron had to pass during the night, but this was perhaps not as trying as the feat of making the long flight in formation.

The 10-P-4, piloted by Lieut. T. D. Guinn, of Atlanta, Ga., circled about over San Francisco Bay for nearly two hours, using its precious gasoline and getting nowhere at all, while waiting for the other planes to rise. McGinnis' plane did likewise for about an hour and 40 minutes.

One Ship Gets Lost.

Some 600 miles off the Golden Gate, the squadron dived into its first fog bank and the 10-P-5, commanded by Lieut. St. John Perry, of Greenville, S. C., became temporarily lost, but rejoined the formation on emerging from the hanging clouds. Four or five hundred miles farther out, Perry got lost again in the same manner, but again came back.

Fair weather forecasts turned out to be somewhat inaccurate, but onward the planes roared, flying "blind," but still in formation through fog during most of the night thereafter.

The dangers of free flying in fog generally are enough to satisfy the adventure pangs of most aviators, but those of taking a squadron of ships through darkness and keeping in formation is something more. Without instruments, fliers often lose all sense of direction, and have been known to let their planes head downward to certain ill fate or toward some other disastrous angle.

Plenty of Support.

But Squadron No. 10 had a generous section of the Navy back of it. Six ships, stationed approximately 300 miles apart along the course, cooperated with lights and wireless to keep the planes headed aright. Through these ships McGinnis and his planes were in unbroken communication with naval headquarters in San Francisco and Honolulu.

For the six men in each plane there was 75 pounds of food, mostly in concentrated form, and 10 gallons of water. Each ship also was equipped with a collapsible boat capable of sustaining the crew in cases of forced landing and abandonment. Instruments designed through years of trial and error in ocean flying were at the hand of every plane commander. There was no guessing.

The contrast between this mass flight and the pioneering attempt made in August, 1925, by the late Commander John Rodgers was a sharp one.

Rodgers, with a crew of four Navy men in one plane, and Lieut. A. P. Snoddy, with a similar Navy outfit, took off from San Francisco Bay. The North Atlantic had been conquered but a few times, and Rodgers was the first to challenge the Pacific. Lindbergh was unknown then.

Saved by Water Still.

Snoddy's plane came down only a few miles off the Golden Gate and was picked up. Rodgers went on, but failed to reach Hawaii. Nine days later, the plane and crew were found unharmed, drifting off the Island of Kauai.

They had fallen short of flying to Hawaii by some 450 miles and had been given up for lost. A small water still which Rodgers had taken along in the plane had saved their lives, enabling them to distill sea weater to drink.

Small Air Lines Declare Bids Were Refused

Lindbergh Wires Inquiry He Is Available for Testimony.

admitted he believed it was true that Brown could and would award the contract, but that he "supposed" he had eliminated it in order to make it not "quite so strong."

Agreements Admitted.

Fred G. Coburn, former president of American Airways and Aviation Corporation, testified early in the day that during the negotiations with Brown in the Postoffice Department, there had been "agreements and understandings" among various lines about who would bid for certain contracts.

Black, during Sheaffer's testimony, pointed to the Federal statute which made it a conspiracy and punishable by a fine to enter into previous agreements with regard to mail contract bidding.

Coburn then resumed the stand and said he wished to "clarify" his previous testimony. Although he did not deny it was generally understood who was to have the bid, he said that there was nevertheless perfect freedom of bidding.

"Finally we operators couldn't come to an agreement, so we left it up to the Postmaster General to divide the lines up. Then we abided by his decision."

"No one violated the general agreement?" asked Black.

"No."

"Oh, then there's a gentleman's agreement, even in aviation," commented the chairman.

Mellon Among Directors.

Black read off a long list of names, including Richard K. Mellon, a nephew of Andrew Mellon, former Republican Secretary of the Treasury, and Stanley Dollar, steamship owner, as among the directors of Aviation Corporation. He supplemented this by listing the contributions each had made to recent Republican campaign funds.

Black yesterday received a telegram from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, whose name was brought into the hearing Wednesday in connection with a gift of $250,000 of stock for technical services to the T. A. T.

"If there is any question about these transactions, I am available to clarify them," said the aviator.

Nothing From Brown.

Black said he had heard nothing yet from Brown concerning the testimony that Brown ordered Postoffice Department files burned, and added that he was not sure whether either Lindbergh or Brown would be subpenaed.

The hearing adjourned until Tuesday, when it expected the question of interlocking directorates among various air lines will be taken up. The committee investigators have prepared elaborate charts, showing just which boards various directors serve on, and how, by having one or two joint directors, almost all the lines in the country are linked together.

It is believed that Lindbergh may be summoned in connection with this phase of the investigation, since he has sat upon several air boards.

House Applies Rigid Gag Rule To Supply Bills

White House Wins First Major Test by Scant 5-Vote Margin.

pel, of California, one of a number of Democrats granted time by Republican leaders to join in the attack.

Opponents of the rule charged Democratic leaders with being fearful of their ability to hold their own forces in line, pleaded that the House should not be gagged into blindly following the Administration, brought up accusations of extravagant spending against the President, and centered their pleas on the need for restoration of Government workers' pay cuts and veterans' benefits.

Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, who steered the rule through, allotted most of his time to speakers who urged support of President Roosevelt's economy program.

At the start of the debate there was no hint of how close its outcome was to be. A ruling by Speaker Rainey on a point of order raised by Representative Snell was sustained by a vote of 261 to 112.

Floor Packed for Contest.

But as the debate proceeded, with speaker after speaker assailing the rule and demanding restoration of the Federal wage cut and veterans' benefits, it became apparent that the outcome was highly uncertain.

Majority leaders rounded up every Democratic member able to reach the House, and the majority benches were packed with nearly 300 Representatives, while Republicans mustered practically their full strength, 113.

The urgent pleas of prominent Republicans—stressing the horrors of gag rule, despite some outspoken Democratic references to recent history—won over more than four score Democrats for the final vote. The five Farmer-Labor members voted against the rule, as did Representative Cullen, of New York's Tammany delegation, and such prominent Democrats as Connery, of Massachusetts; Gillette, of Iowa; Imhoff, of Maryland, and Shannon, of Missouri.

The independent offices appropriation bill will be before the House today, with the gag rule in effect, but while its passage there is assured there is stormy weather ahead in the Senate.

Senator Hatfield (Republican), West Virginia, has filed an amendment to the measure to restore the entire 15 per cent pay cut to Federal employes and payments taken from veterans by existing economy laws.

White House May Act.

It is possible that President Roosevelt, who earlier yesterday conferred with the House organization committee on plans for keeping Democrats in line on the bill, may send a communication on the subject to the Senate.

The President's two letters, read to the House by Representative Buchanan yesterday, explained the executive order of January 9, maintaining the 15 per cent pay cut until June 30, upheld the decision to restore only one-third of the cut in the fiscal year of 1935, and referring to privileges of promotion to be conferred upon the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and three companion services.

"The problem of returning as quickly as possible to a balanced budget is involved," the President wrote. "To undo the excellent results of the economy act would be unfortunate."

It was upon this premise that Democratic leaders made their plea for House support, declaring President Roosevelt himself approved the rule they sought to bring in and have adopted.

And it was for this reason that the close vote occasioned such surprise. It was the first major test of the President's power over the House.

Both Sides Confident.

When it was over, Democratic leaders expressed confidence that the victory would be a forerunner of others by wider margins, and credited the Rpublicans' success yesterday to their having clouded the issue with irrelevant speeches about veterans' World War connected disability compensation and the sad fate of postal subntitutes.

Republicans, who cheered enthusiastically when the final vote was announced, were greatly heartened by the President's close call. Some favored attempting to prevent passage of the offices' bill in protest against the economy provisions which are exempt from amendments. There was little possibility that thin could be accomplished, however.

As a result of the gag rule, the Republicans, except through committee members, have no chance to amend any of the 10 forthcoming appropriation bills, and the general economy program has been speeded up accordingly.

Without the economy legislation asked by the President and attached as a rider to the appropriations bill supplying funds to run 16 governmental independent offices in the next fiscal year, the Federal pay cut would have expired June 30.

Veterans' benefits are not affected by the present bill, although it was the subject of strenuous speechmaking yesterday.

Stork Foils Police Intent on Arrest

Bluecoats Forego Duty to Leave Home in Peace.

New Orleans, Jan. 11 (AP).—The stork and the police, both on official business, arrived at the same time today at the home of James Sherman and the police retired in favor of the stork.

It happened the police wanted Sherman for an alleged narcotic offense. Two bluecoats pounded loudly on the door.

Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, moved to reconsider the passage Wednesday of the liquor revenue bill, explaining he wished to bring about a second vote on the Clark amendment to that measure. The Clark measure, which was passed 40 to 39, would levy duties of $5 and $3 a gallon, respectively, on whiskies and wines from nations in default to the United States Government in addition to the regular tariffs and taxes.

Senator Bennett C. Clark (Democrat), Missouri, moved to table the Harrison motion but lost by a vote of 28 to 45. There followed a series of motions and roll calls until the section penalizing the defaulting nations again was before the Senate. This time it was defeated, 30 to 44.

Bill Sent to Roosevelt.

The liquor bill was repassed without the Clark amendment and Senator Harrison asked for a second appointment of conferees. A few minutes later he withdrew this request, explaining the House was ready to concur in the few amendments made to the bill by the Senate. Late in the day the House concurred, with only a single objection, and the bill was sent to the White House, where President Roosevelt was expected to sign it momentarily.

After defeating the Clark measure, which President Roosevelt opposed, the Senate leaders went to luncheon, with the contented feeling that they had again brought their followers into line. Had the House voted on and concurred in the Clark amendment, it would have been the President's first serious setback in Congress and it would have jeopardized the success of his reciprocal tariff program.

Johnson Calls Up Bill.

While the Senate Democratic leaders tarried at luncheon, however, Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California, who ardently believes Congress should show its displeasure over the debt defaulting, called up his bill prohibiting financial transactions with any foreign government in default on obligations to the United States.

The text of this measure is as follows:

"Hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person within the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States to purchase or sell the bonds, securities or other obligations of any foreign government issued after the passage of this act, or to make any loan to such foreign government, including any political subdivision thereof, while such government or political subdivision is in default in the payment of its obligations or any thereof, to the Government or to any citizen of the United States or to any corporation organized in the United States.

$10,000 Fine Provided.

"Any person violating the provisions of this act shall upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $10,000—or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both."

This measure would forbid financing not only by those nations in default on war debt payments but also by those nations whose governments have defaulted on bond issues sold here during 1920 and 1930 and now are in default. This would outlaw new American financing by almost all Latin-American republics.

Only a few Senators were in the chamber when Senator Johnson called up his bill. He said its purpose was obvious and asked an immediate vote. Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, said he had no objections to the bill but would like to make a speech on bimetallism. Half way through his speech, however, he yielded and Senator Johnson again asked for a vote. Without objection to the small group sitting around, the bill was passed.

Record Power For Gov. Peery Assembly Plan

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 11. — Greater power than ever before vested in a Virginia executive may be granted to Gov.-elect George C. Peery, it was learned tonight.

Plans of Democratic leaders to broaden the new governor's authority, involving many prospective economies through consolidation of bureaus and equalization of salaries, overshadowed today's session of the General Assembly, which culminated in a recess until Monday.

Senator Robert O. Norris, Lancaster County, chairman of the Senate economy committee, disclosed his group would sponsor eight bills intended to bring retrenchment expected to save the State more than $1,000,000 annually.

1,400 State Cars Target.

One of the measures, it was learned, would delegate to the governor authority to consolidate departments and bureaus and equalize salaries. Another would eliminate 1,400 State-owned automobiles; employes instead would be paid on a mileage basis for use of their own cars.

Another economy bill would replace all justices of the peace with trial justices and payments to sheriffs for boarding prisoners also would be sharply curtailed.

Friends of the economy legislation predicted their program would prevent future deficits in State funds. They said sufficient votes to guarantee prompt passage are anticipated.

Outstanding among several score bills introduced today were measures to reduce the gasoline gallonage tax from 5 to 4 cents and scale downward automobile license rates. The gasoline proposal was advanced by Delegate R. H. Daughton, Norfolk, and W. H. Scott, Roanoke. Delegate R. F. McMurran, Portsmouth, offered the car license bill.

New Scale Asked.

Mr. McMurran's measure would substitute for the present rate of 70 cents per 100 pounds a scale taxing cars of 3,000 pounds or less at $10; cars of 3,000 to 4,000 pounds, $15; 4,000 to 5,000 pounds, $25; 5,000 to 6,000 pounds, $35, and above 6,000 pounds, $45. A majority of machines would be in the $10 class.

Messrs. Daughton and Scott also advanced a bill to require distribution of State highway construction funds among political subdivisions on the basis of incompleted primary road mileage.

Mr. McMurran introduced a measure asking appointment of a commission to study judicial redistricting.

Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, House finance chairman, sponsored a proposal to regulate construction of outdoor billboards. Such signs would be banned from curves and the immediate vicinity of intersections.

Lobbyists could not be paid fees contingent on the defeat or passage of legislation, under a bill offered by the Norfolk delegation.

Senate Barber Towels in a Hovel Once Set City on Slum Crusade

A view of Alexander's Court northwest, between K and L and Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, looking north into a 12-foot alley entrance. (Courtesy National Park and Planning Commission.)

It Happened Under T.R., When Jacob Riis Aroused Drive.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate barber shop towels were responsible for elimination of one of Washington's worst alley communities.

The story is told by John Ihlder, chairman of the housing committee of the Council of Social Agencies and housing consultant of the National Capitol Park and Planning Commission. It is contained in a pamphlet on Washington alleys.

The incident occurred during the administration of Theodore Roosevelt. Jacob Riis, a friend of Roosevelt, came to Washington and visited the alleys.

"Then he appeared before a Senate committee," Mr. Ihlder relates. "He talked about all Washington alleys, but, to make his point clearer, he spoke specifically about Willow Tree Alley. He described its unfit, insanitary, dilapidated dwellings."

Strikes Close to Home.

"He described one house in particular. An occupant of that house was far gone with tuberculosis. 'And in that house,' said Mr. Riis, 'I saw the towels of the Senate barber shop drying.' The Senate acted. It got rid of that house. It got rid of all the houses in that particular alley. But it did not change the problem, for there are today more than 250 inhabited alleys containing approximately 2,400 dwellings with an estimated population of from 11,000 to 13,000 men, women and children."

(As was explained in a previous article, estimates of the number of alleys and the number of inhabitants vary considerably. The Health Department estimates are much lower than those of Mr. Ihlder. However, most of the persons interested in alley elimination contend the Health Department estimates are too low.)

Willow Tree alley was turned into a playground. Congress appropriated $78,000 for the purpose. Condemnation of property cost $61,000. There was little remaining for improvement of the property.

Urges All Be Eliminated.

Mr. Ihlder, who has made a thorough study of Washington alley conditions, has reached some interesting conclusions. He points out, among other things, Washington's great need for garage space. A survey by traffic officials indicates that 57,000 automobiles are parked all night in Washington streets. Mr. Ihlder points out that many of the alleys could be converted into garages and parking spaces. Not all the alleys, by any means, are in the poorer neighborhoods. Some of them exist back of some of the better sections of the city. Thus elimination of the alleys in some sections would be a partial solution to the parking problem.

The growing number of apartment buildings, requiring more space than old residences, also appeals to Mr. Ihlder in connection with the alley problem. In some cases old houses could be torn down and apartment buildings erected, covering not only the site of the houses, but extending back into the land now occupied by alley residences. Of course, this would happen only in a few cases and would possibly not be a great factor in alley elimination.

The increased value of open space in the rear of business buildings for parking and for loading and unloading automobiles also is pointed out as having a bearing on the alley problem. Alleys behind business buildings could be eliminated and the land used for these purposes.

Cites Need of Play Spots.

The fourth point made by Mr. Ihlder is the increased need for open spaces for play and recreation.

"The smaller city of 1914 (when alley legislation was being passed) with its many vacant lots, its more easily accessible countryside, did not require the public open spaces that the present city does," Mr. Ihlder says. "Also, today streets are far more dangerous play places than they were in 1914."

"During the many decades that Congress and the District government have been dealing with the inhabited alleys," Mr. Ihlder says in a report to the National Park and Planning Commission, "effort has been directed principally at curing certain obvious ills, such as insanitary conditions.

"The results have been disappointing, because these efforts did not reach the root cause, which is that the alley dwellings are concealed. They constitute hidden communities in which disease, vice and crime flourish.

Task Made Difficult.

"It does not matter whether they breed criminals and persons diseased morally, mentally or physically, or whether they attract such persons. Probably they do both. The facts are that they contain an undue proportion of these human liabilities and that, because of being hidden communities, they increase the difficulty of dealing with these human liabilities constructively.

"Moreover, because they have no direct outlets, or have inadequate outlets, the alleys do not have thorough ventilation. The wider ones are like cups into which the summer sun pours and which hold heat night and day."

The housing committee of the Washington Council of Social Agencies made a study of alley rentals and alley property values, as compared with those outside the alleys, to determine whether it would be a hardship for the alley dwellers to move into street houses. Its investigation was confined to squares containing dwellings most nearly like those in the alleys.

$1 a Month Per Room.

The rentals of the alley houses investigated began at $1 to $1.99 (133 houses) per month per room. The rentals of the street houses began at $2 to $2.99. The greatest number of alley houses in which rentals were secured are in the group $2 to $2.99 (399 houses), and $3 to $3.99 (842 houses). Of the vacant street houses investigated, 44 rent for $2 to $2.99; 122 rent for $3 to $3.99; 162 rent for $4 to $4.99; 182 rent from $5 to $5.99. Of the alley houses investigated, 206 rent for $4 to $4.99 and 40 rent for $5 to $5.99.

So, while the alley houses begin at a lower rental and the street houses go to a higher rental, there is an overlap which includes the majority of both street and alley houses investigated.

The committee reported that the majority of the street houses were in good condition as compared with the alley houses investigated.

Inaugural Day Plans Complete At Richmond

Virginia Military Units to March in Parade for Governors.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 11.—Historic Virginia Military organizations, including the Richmond Blues, will participate in the inauguration of George C. Peery, as governor next Wednesday.

Plans for the ceremony were completed today by committees of the General Assembly. Earlier, the Legislature canvassed the vote and formally reported Peery was chosen as governor in the last election by a majority of 82,443 votes. The Legislative Committee will join the retiring governor, John Garland Pollard, at the State Capitol at 11 a. m., Wednesday. With a military escort, he will lead a three-mile parade through Richmond.

Pausing at the John Marshall Hotel, the procession will greet Governor-elect Perry. Returning to the south portico of Capitol, the new governor will be administered the oath of office by Chief Justice Preston Campbell, State Supreme Court of Appeals.

The ceremonies will close with the inaugural message of the new governor.

Included on the legislative inaugural committee: Saxon W. Holt, president pro-tem of the Senate; and Senators S. J. Thompson, E. E. Holland, Aubrey G. Weaver and T. G. Vaughan; House Speaker J. Sinclair Brown and Delegates Aston Dovell, K. E. Harman, Wilbur C. Hall, C. W. Moss, John Q. Rhodes, and Maitland H. Bustard.

Police of Danville Get Radio System

Danville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—City Purchasing Agent Berkeley Pollok has signed a contract for installation of a short wave radio transmitter and receiver for the police department.

Police cars will be equipped with receivers. The cost of the installation will be $1,500.

Boy, Injured Coasting, Dies in Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.). The only coasting victim in Cumberland this season, Walter William Shober, 8, son of Walter and Rose Shober, of Dilley street, died yesterday at Allegany Hospital.

He was injured December 29 while sledding with James, his 5-year-old brother, on Fairview avenue. They ran into a parked truck. The younger brother is still in the hospital.

Lions' Club to Erect Signs on Laurel Roads

Three large Lions' Club signs are to be placed at the three main entrances to Laurel, Md. Two will be on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, one at the northern entrance and one at the southern, and the other at the Montgomery County entrance.

Virginia Liquor Bills Speeded

Assembly Hearings Jan. 18 Set for All Plans of State Sale.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Richmond, Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Liquor legislation will be given right-of-way in the General Assembly, in efforts to pass a control bill by February 1.

Leaders agreeing today on a movement to speed whisky action included Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, Hause Finance Chairman; Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, House Democratic leader; Maitland Bustard, Danville, Delegate C. W. Moss, Richmond, and Senator A. P. Staples, Roanoke.

Finance Committees of both Houses, will conduct hearings January 18 on all liquor bills, including the Administration-sponsored dispensary plan; independent proposals for sale by the drink in hotels, clubs and restaurants, and private sale in the original package for consumption off the premises.

The committees also will consider a resolution by Hall calling on Congress to limit liquor gallonage taxes to $1.50 and a similar measure by Edgar B. English and Albert O. Boschen, both of Richmond, asking a Federal maximum of 70 cents.

Redwood's Rosy Glow Is Denied by Expert

San Jose, Calif. (U.P.).—California redwood does not give off a red glow when burned, it was explained by Rev. George Nickelsburg. He was driving several Eastern visitors past a lumber mill. Smoke from the mill's stacks took on a glow from the setting sun.

Oklahoma City Liked As Convention Site

Oklahoma City, Okla. (U.P.).—Oklahoma City ranks next to New York and Chicago in number of conventions scheduled for 1934, according to the December issue of World Convention Dates.

Oklahoma Ready for Snow.

Oklahoma City, Okla (U.P.).—Oklahoma, where heavy snow is a rarity, has provided snow fences for most State highways and purchased snow plows and removal equipment.

No End of Books

On Little Magazines.

Until the "little magazines" learn one thing—and for that matter the same observation applies to a number of conspicuous present-day authors—I can not see they are going to get very far. For it remains a blind alley, this trust that shock, pure and simple, is a factor in literary power.

Shock was very dear to the writers of the "new literature" during the last 20 years. Baudelaire, for one, gave them a start. They looked into the mountain of James Joyce and plucked out the mouse of "frankness." With considerable glee and a great deal of tub-thumping, writers tried furiously to outdo each other in "curling the hair of the public." Plainly enough, that day recedes farther and farther. Though Mr. Hemingway is still discoursing about maggots in a battlefield.

Among the authors in the "little magazines," the device yet thrives. With all young writers, they tend to believe that there is nothing like a grotesque death or an ingenious form of seduction to give point to a story. Speak out and shock—that is the formula. But where once it was just about the only way of writing, it now has other company.

* * * * *

For one has only to turn over a few pages in some of these "little magazines" to see that the die-hard device is vanishing at last, that the writers themselves have sniffed a certain staleness about it. Quickest of all literary weathervanes, the "little magazines" are swinging around to the puffs of a fresh breeze from a new quarter. Only occasionally does an item pull the weathervane back.

Like all excellence, this new direction is hard to define. Certainly there is shown a greater attention to the more normal events of life and an increasing faith that these can be narrated simply and movingly. Certainly there appears less concern for startling action and a deeper intentness on character. To my eye the stories in the "little magazines" are growing round, sound and intelligent.

* * * * *

Three such magazines, each denoted as "Vol. 1, No. 1," have come in. They form a very fair sample of what our young writers desire and are accomplishing.

The first of these, "The Fourth Decade: a Magazine of New Writers," is a bimonthly published locally by Paul M. A. Linebarger at 2006 R street. Its modesty is appealing, for it is mimeographed (as was the now-famous "Story" when it started in Vienna in 1931), and the proprietors, "owing to the earliness of the venture," will not take subscriptions for more than a half year. Lee Alexander, James Whiting Saunders, Benjamin Klein Schwarz and Helen Swick are the editors.

The note of the enterprise is struck by Mr. Linebarger in the dedication: "We shall try to build in an age when there is nothing left to destroy, and build for the years of equality, legality, morality that lie ahead." Surely nothing could be more high-minded. In the contents I liked best Mr. Saunders' plea that contemporary American music be given a hearing, and Mr. John Roger's story "Madelon," which seemed to embody the very transition I have been speaking about. Also four lines by Mr. Alexander called "Note on Domestic Economy," which, although distinctly not representative of the magazine, are worth quoting:

"Lady of the icy heart,
Here's my consolation—
I shall marry you and get
Free refrigeration."

It never hurt a serious program to be amusing at times.

* * * * *

Rather more ambitious is a magazine from Athens, Ohio, called "Manuscript," which is printed in two colors, contains notes from Zona Gale and Erskine Caldwell ("a new crop of writers is sadly needed," he writes), and lists some 20 contributors.

But the new crop seems a bit wan, a bit on the order of what you might call the "professional little magaziner." Yet Warren Bower's "The Bull," with its little boy suddenly discovering the meaning of courage, and Hilde Abel's "Great-Great-Grandmother," with its honest character study of two very old women, were as capable stories as one could hope to see. As to poetry, however, the time is graciously past for such lines as these:

"The vendors of the gas balloons are still
And not a single bilious cry is spent

* * * * *

The last of these "little magazines" at hand comes from Beverly Hills, Calif. Called simply "The Magazine: a Literary Journal," it jumped to a good start with the aid of such recognized writers as Josephine Herbst, author of "Pity Is Not Enough," a fine novel published by Harcourt Brace last year and Yvor Winters, instructor of English at Stanford with five books of verse to his credit. Their contributions were quite the best.

But in these handsomely printed pages the shock school enters into its own again. Six deaths and a flood in four stories are just plain funny.

He Finds Time Has Strong Grip As Well as Speed

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.). William Brewbaker's experience this morning taught him that under his pillow is no place for an alarm clock.

When the alarm rang at 5:45 a. m., Brewbaker felt something tugging at his hair. The clock had slipped from beneath the pillow and Brewbaker's hair was matted in the wheels. The back of the case had been removed.

With the clock clutching his hair, Brewbaker hurried to a neighbor, who cut him free.

Dies of Pneumonia

Lieut. Col. Frank Thorpe, jr., died yesterday of pneumonia contracted at the funeral of his daughter, Alice, 10.

Stricken at Rites For Daughter, Col. Thorpe Die

Military Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow at 11 A. M. in Arlington.

Lieut. Col. Frank Thorpe, jr., 50, who died yesterday in Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, of pneumonia contracted while attending the funeral of his daughter, Alice, 10, will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery, with full military honors, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Son of Brig. Gen. Frank Thorpe, Lieut. Col. Thorpe had been instructor of the 110th Field Artillery, of the Maryland National Guard, in Pikesville, Md. He was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry in 1907, and served in the World War.

Col. Thorpe was graduated from the Mounted Service School in 1912, and from the Field Artillery School in 1926. In 1927 he won the honor of distinguished graduate of the Command and General Staff School, Fort Levenworth, Kans.

Col. Thorpe is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Thorpe, and two sons, Frank, 3d., 14, and Matthew B. Thorpe, 12. He was a native of Fort Hamilton, N. Y.

Once-Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

FAREWELL TO CONFIDENCE.

Gone are all the old traditions—
Chaos must be very near;
Circumstances and conditions
Leave a world that's odd and queer.
All our terrors I thought scattered
And the crisis over, but
Now my confidence is shattered—
Babe's agreed to take a cut!

I had thought the outlook sunny
And depression nearly o'er;
I had looked for ample money
And the happiness of yore;
With my pessimism shaken,
I was making statements rash;
But I must have been mistaken—
Ruth will take a sal'ry slash!

It had seemed to me the morrow
Had a rather rosy glow;
I had said farewell to sorrow
And uncertainty and woe;
Confidence had ousted terror,
And I sang a roundelay;
But I must have been in error—
Ruth will take a cut in pay!

Normalcy I saw returning,
And I danced about in glee;
Trade, the figures said, was churning,
And the world looked good to me.
I pooh-poohed the doubtful sages,
But today, my spirits fell;
To the news of lower wages—
Babe Ruth answered "Very well!"

Roosevelt, I thought, was winning,
With the slump well on the run;
Pessimism, I thought, thinning
And recovery begun;
Everything looked hunky-dory,
But it must have been a dream—
When he heard that wage-cut story
The Bambino didn't scream!

Once again the world seemed jolly,
And the cry was: "Hit the line!"
Talk of woe ahead seemed folly,
And I even ordered wine.
I had thought the future nifty,
But my thoughts were far from hot—
When they talked of less than fifty
Babe just answered, "Well, why not!"

So I know the world is ailing
And that skies are far from blue;
Washington is unavailing
And the New Deal just won't do.
Pull the shutters (and no kidding),
For the planet's in distress
When the Babe admits he's skidding
And will do his stuff for less.

LEARNING THE WORST.

Attendance at the New York Automobile Show has been the greatest in years. There seems to be a determination on the part of pedestrians to see what they will have to dodge in 1934.

British Expect 2 New Metals To Change War

Better Planes Are Forecast With Substance Lighter Than Aluminum.

London (U.P.).—The perfection of two new metals which will revolutionize modern warfare and industry in peace times has just been reported. The inventors are British.

Bullets made from one of the metals, both of which contain chromium steel and aluminum, would pierce the covering of a tank, will make drills that never wear out and metal plating that won't wear off.

A rock drill merely tipped with the metal will never lose its sharpness and will bore the rock twice as quickly as drills now in use, it is claimed. The chromium content gives the metal a bright appearance and makes it invaluable for plating purposes.

The second metal will have a revolutionary effect on airplane design and construction. It is reputed to be lighter than aluminum and stronger than steel. The use of this metal in airplane framework would increase considerably the machine's speed as well as rendering it much safer.

With research and experimental work on the two discoveries complete it is estimated that they will be ready for commercial production within two months.

Court Gives Him Castor Oil for Chaser!

"Drink it down like a man," said Police Magistrate Alvin H. Pickens, of Denver, and Harry Cessing did, thereby saving himself a $10 fine. Cessing and six other men, who pleaded guilty to intoxication charges following celebration of the new year, were given their choice by Judge Pickens—either castor oil or a fine. All voted for castor oil, which they had to take "straight." It was a big dose, too.

Morgenthau Serves Bootleg, Seeks to Bolster Legal Stock

mitting the use of molasses alcohol in addition to grain alcohol for 45 days.

At the same time, Capt. D. Spencer Bliss, commissioner of industrial alcohol, revealed the country's supply of bonded whisky is less than 1,000,000 gallons, which is insufficient to supply the Nation a week at the present rate of consumption.

The good liquor served by Secretary Morgenthau to newspapermen was bootleg whisky. The bad liquor was legal whisky. Morgenthau pointed out that the bootleg whisky was better because it had been aged, while the legal whisky had been rectified by combining a small amount of good whisky with green whisky.

Bootleg Rum Superior.

He used this as an argument for permitting importation of good whisky and making possible the use of pure alcohol in rectifying, instead of raw whisky.

When reporters entered the Secretary's office, they found eight bottles lined up on his desk. They were invited to sample the contents and express an opinion. They agree with him that the bootleg whisky was superior.

The only available legal American-made whisky, other than the small quantity of bonded liquor still in existence, is green liquor, at most only a few weeks old.

There is not sufficient alcohol in the United States to begin to supply the demand for rectifying purposes, in spite of the fact every distillery is working 24 hours a day.

Because of the alcohol shortage, whisky now on sale is composed of an average of 5 per cent—sometimes as low as 1 per cent—or aged whisky, 95 to 99 per cent of liquor just out of the still, and coloring matter to give an aged appearance.

Bonded Supply Dwindling.

Tests made by Government chemists, as well as by private chemists, show that a good grade of bootleg whisky, aged in a charred barrel for six months, is far superior to legal whisky.

When prohibition was repealed there were in the warehouses of the United States a total of 6,000,000 gallons of bonded liquor, according to Capt. Bliss, who estimated the present supply is less than 1,000,000 gallons. To meet the demand, 100,000,000 gallons of aged whisky will be needed annually, he believes, and he added there is no reason to believe there will be such a supply for four or five years.

Most of the bonded whisky that has been withdrawn from the warehouses has not been sold as such, Capt. Bliss said. Instead, it has been mixed with alcohol or green whisky and sold as rectified whisky. Of the 6,000,000 gallons of bonded liquor in warehouses, 4,500,000 gallons were in barrels and 1,500,000 gallons in bottles. There is evidence that most of the bottles have been opened and their contents used to make rectified whisky.

Alcohol Shortage Acute.

"There has been very little good whisky of any kind on sale since prohibition," Capt. Bliss said. "There is no objection to rectifying with alcohol if enough whisky is used, but the supply of whisky was stretched so far that even when pure alcohol was used the result was not good.

"Then the alcohol shortage became so acute and the price so high that most manufacturers simply turned to green liquor. The drinker can detect that kind immediately. It has what we call a 'slop taste.'"

The lifting of the ban on molasses alcohol, in the opinion of Capt. Bliss, will have some effect in stopping the use of raw whisky for rectifying. He estimated the amount of such alcohol that could be turned over to distillers at 14,000,000 gallons.

"But what will the manufacturers mix with the alcohol?" he asks.

With the supply of good American whisky virtually exhausted, the import restrictions on American type whisky—rye and Bourbon—have been temporarily lifted. Capt. Bliss estimates there are 15,000,000 gallons of such whisky available for import, nearly all from Canada.

Bottled Supply Scarce.

This either may be sold in bottles or used for rectifying. As compared with the estimated need of 100,000,000 gallons a year, this supply is not large.

What then?

Capt. Bliss said he couldn't answer. The only apparent solution is more green liquor.

But there is one touch of silver behind the cloud that accompanies the drouth. That is the fact, according to Capt. Bliss, that whisky, aged for six months in charred barrels, is not bad—at least not nearly as bad as the product hardly cold from the still that is being legally sold now. Capt. Bliss said this whisky should be on a par with good bootleg whisky now being sold and that there should be at least a partial supply of six-month old spirits six months from now.

The gin supply is being affected by the shortage of alcohol. Most American gin is rectified. It can not be rectified with green whisky. Alcohol must be used. Unless the supply of alcohol is materially increased, gin drinkers will not be able to obtain a supply.

Import restrictions were tightened to permit returning Americans to bring with them only one quart of liquor duty free. Under customs regulations they are allowed to bring in $100 worth of merchandise without paying duty. Reports from the Canadian border indicate thousands of Americans making a practice of bringing in $100 worth of liquor.

Tests Reveal Bootleg Liquor Best Available

Speakeasies Thrive Again and Clients Demand Prerepeal Nectar.

That figure in modern life—the speakeasy proprietor—who provided welcome oases for parched souls in the times of drought and whose doors repeatedly crumbled before the battering rams of raiding squads, is not in danger of losing his clients, because his product showed marked superiority when compared chemically with the same brand of liquor sold lawfully in Prince George's County.

A capable chemist was asked by The Post to examine specimens of liquor. The objects of scrutiny were 2 pints of liquor purchased in licensed stores in Prince Georges County, 2 pints of prescription whisky bought in Washington, and 3 pints of bootleg booze obtained from long-established speakeasy proprietors and bootleggers.

Back to Bootleg Stuff.

In his elaborately furnished speakeasy in the downtown section, the proprietor sold his best liquor at $3 a pint, with the observation: "I had some of the legal stuff in stock, but the customers objected. Said it wasn't good. So I had to go back to the old stuff which I have been selling during prohibition."

The pint was compared with an identical brand, purchased in Maryland at $2 a pint, and the bootleg product showed an alcoholic proof of 98, or the equivalent of 49 per cent alcohol in the bottle. Its more dignified counterpart, the lawfully purchased bottle, tested only 91 proof, or the equal of 45.5 per cent alcohol in the pint bottle.

The legal drink had been drastically "rectified," which is a high-sounding term used to designate the "cutting" process which was widely practiced by hip-pocket whisky vendors during the Volsteadian era. The formula is to add alcohol to a fractional part of aged whisky. Caramel had been used to compensate for the anemic hue in the legal stuff, caused by the addition of the white alcohol.

Maryland Rye the Best.

The illicit pint was naturally colored, taking its deep amber tint and mellowness from the charred keg, in which it had aged since distillation. Its acids and aldahydes, which give the flavoring qualities, were vastly superior to those of its law-favored competitor.

The most potent wallop of all was packed in a pint "jug" of old Maryland rye—the beverage which was the salvation of thirst-stricken Washingtonians in the early years of prohibition's sway. This draught, so readily accessible in the early days of the dry era, tested 110 proof, or the equivalent of 55 per cent alcohol to the pint.

This drink is superior to the cheaper grades of lawfully sold liquors and is almost equal to the better brands. Maryland rye was naturally colored, however, insufficient aging and "rawness" combined with other elements to detract from its percentages of flavoring qualities.

Bootlegger in Disrepute, Too.

The office bootlegger, faithful but ever tardy, has fallen from his pedestal. He is the fellow who ran the "cuff," and was liberal with it if it did not exceed $10. He is the one who, on a hurry call, could always be depended upon to deliver his wares within 24 hours, providing he did not meet someone en route with whom he could converse. In that event, it was a matter of grave doubt, whether he ever would arrive.

But he has been plunged into disrepute by the searching eyes of the chemist. His merchandise showed only 70 proof, was artificially colored and was very low in flavoring elements. It is all because he tried to stretch beyond the bounds of good "cutting" a pint of prescription whisky Thus, by the addition of too little alcohol and too much water, a pint of good whisky was spoiled. But he is still doing business, mostly "on the cuff," and at $1.50 a pint.

Neither the bootleg whiskies nor the legalized blends can compare favorably with the old straight, bonded liquor, which may be had only by the chosen few who carry prescriptions.

That Bonded Nectar.

A sample of bottled in bond prescription liquor, which retails at $2.75, tested about 100 proof, and was rich in flavoring aldahydes and acids, making it really a nectar.

Cheaper grades of prescription liquor are better in quality and more delicately blended than the high and medium qualities of lawful whisky, but the best grade of bootleg shows slightly superior qualities than the $1.50 per pint "scrip." Cheaper prescription products tested 94 proof and the coloring is natural, no caramel having been added in the blending process, but the flavoring properties are less than those in the $3 per pint bootleg.

What will the District's legal liquor be like? Will it take its place on the liquor shelves next to the Maryland merchandise; bowing to superior bootleg whisky or will Congress require whisky to meet certain standards?

J. A. Dowrick, Builder Here 40 Years, Dies

Complications After Fall on Icy Pavement Fatal; Funeral Saturday.

James A. Dowrick, Washington builder, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital as the result of a fall on the icy pavements near his home several weeks ago. He was 74 years of age.

Born in Whitehaven, England, he came to this country in 1885 and began his career with the construction of the courthouse in Scranton, Pa. He moved to Washington and for more than 40 years dealt in the construction of many churches and theaters here. He was a member of several Masonic orders.

Complications developed late Wednesday night and despite efforts to save his life with axygen he died within a few hours.

He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Isabelle Pirie Dowrick; three daughters, Violet J. and Lillian B. Dowrick and Mrs. Joseph Paul VanOvermeer, of New York, and four sons, James Pirie, of Detroit; John Lindsay, of London, England, and Leonard and C. Stewart.

Funeral services will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral parlors. Burial will be held at 2 p. m. Saturday in Glenwood Cemetery.

activities of Henry R. Milton, a bootlegger, who admitted before the trial borad that he had been engaged for more than six years in peddling liquor and had never been arrested. He operated a fleet of automobiles, he said, in which he made deliveries in all sections of the city.

Sought "Head Man."

In the past six months, Bauer said, they had arrested four runners employed by Milton and were anxious to get the "head man." On October 28, he said, they arrested Dudley, one of Milton's runners, and, meanwhile, he had been promised information by a man, thought to be Milton, against another bootlegger with an extensive trade.

Bauer said he knew he had been "framed" after he had taken an envelope from Dudley on October 30. This envelope, he said, was supposed to contain the information, but when he saw three police night inspectors he "knew something was wrong. Night inspectors only police policemen."

When Lieut. Oscar Letterman, one of the night inspectors, asked him for the "package." Bauer said he did not believe he meant the envelope which Dudley had handed him. The envelope, containing $50, was found on him when he was searched.

Wagner Heads Threat Against Administration

Democratic Stalwart Splits Away on Question of Waterway.

the issue has become one of the broadest raised at this session. It is the one on which the President is expected to meet his most critical test of strength so far this year.

If politics makes strange bedfellows, it sometimes throws up opposition in the most unexpected places. Seeing a menace to New York City as the great Atlantic port, Senator Wagner has parted company with the White House temporarily, though as a member of the President's National Labor Board, and as sponsor of the National recovery act and other New Deal legislation, he continues in sympathy with the general program.

Wagner Sees Conflict.

In fact, it is because he believes Mr. Roosevelt is advocating a proposition which conflicts with other phases of the recovery program that Senator Wagner is able to appeal to so many Senators from other States who are not all concerned over whether New York might lose some foreign trade if ocean vessels were free to run up the St. Lawrence and out through the lakes to Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee and Duluth-Superior.

The St. Lawrence project also contemplates a major power development, but to this Senator Wagner is not opposed. He would like to sever it from the transportation project. Though some feeling exists that consumer demand does not exist sufficiently to warrant extension of hydroelectric power in that area, the real opposition to the treaty is on other grounds.

Farmers Gave Support.

The drive for opening up a 27-foot channel to let ocean vessels through the lakes was based originally on the argument that it would put farmers closer, in terms of freight costs, to European markets. On this theory the project won wide support throughout the farm belt, even as far west as Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas and Montana. A picture was built up of 40,000,000 persons in that region shipping wheat and other farm products direct to Europe and receiving in return an inflow of manufactured commodities.

But this picture was rudely upset when the Administration gave up hope of finding large foreign markets for farm products and began spending millions to cut down acreage and to buy inferior farm land to take it out of cultivation. Opponents of the treaty argue that with agriculture being put on a domestic basis, it is not necessary to spend what they estimate to be $573,000,000 to open a new route to the sea, which would function seven months a year, for exports which were not in sight. In addition, the present tariff policy would preclude heavy return traffic back from Europe into the farm belt.

Rails Opposed.

Another contradiction is seen by some in the railroad competition that would be set up. Naturally railroads object to the Government financing a water competitor. The Government, through the RFC, has advanced nearly $400,000,000 to tide railroads through the depression. Rather than finance a water competitor to keep freight rates in control, the Government, it is argued, can exercise its restraining influence directly through the Interstate Commerce Commission, without encouraging what might prove to be destructive competition.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, told the Senate in his special message that such fears, as well as the apprehensions of localities, were grossly exaggerated, and that improved communications, on the contrary, have always worked to the benefit of all sections. Nevertheless, the railroads and the railroad employe organizations, which are powerfully formed, are exerting strong pressure. Danger of throwing more railroad employes out of work have made at least two Senators from Great Lakes States dubious about supporting the treaty.

Port States Fight Plan.

Other centers of opposition include the Atlantic port States from Virginia north, the Mississippi River and Gulf States, all of which fear diversion of traffic out through the Lakes.

The proposal has aroused deep sectional division and set up cross-currents among special interests affected, and has taken its place as one of the confusing elements in the National recovery program. As a bone of contention it has overshadowed NRA, the budget and other emergency questions which had been slated for early attack, and in addition brought one of the Administration's otherwise stanchest supporters forward as the leader of the opposition.

Antietam Area Jobs Program Parley Today

Battlefield Restoration to Be Advanced at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A conference will be held here tomorrow by the board of directors of the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce and James R. McConaghie, superintendent of Gettysburg National Military Park, relative to the program now in progress at the Antietam Battlefield by 11 CWA workers.

Dr. Robert Jones, in charge of securing historical data of the Civil War battle fought there, and Capt. John Kyd Beckenbaugh, recently appointed superintendent of the Antietam Battlefield, will also attend.

The chamber two years ago prepared a program for the battlefield improvements, with the estimated cost of each, and sent it to Representative David J. Lewis.

Those projects which have not been completed will be discussed tomorrow.

Included is the restoration of the old Dunkard Church, used during the battle as a hospital, and erection on the mountain overlooking the battlefield of a lookout. It was from this spot that Gen. McClelland, Union commander, directed his forces. A headquarters building, where relics may be placed, also has been recommended. Opening of a number of roads has been suggested.

Real Estate Inventory.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A CWA real estate inventory has been started here under the direction of John W. Hoffman, district census supervisor. Fourteen men and a clerk are employed. Sidney Hammond, assistant supervisor, and Marshall H. Wilson, Washington, D. C., area supervisor, mapped the survey, reports of which are for the use of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Included in information to be gathered will be data showing the condition of property, number of vacant houses and apartments, number of families "doubling up," equipment installed and other similar facts. The survey will also show the average current rental compared with the census data of 1929. Frederick and Hagerstown are the only places in Maryland where this survey will be made.

Another survey under way here is the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, operating through CWA funds. Work in this section it between Frederick and Harpers Ferry and as far west as Hancock. Surveyors are erecting small concrete monuments with brass markers.

Other projects, including street and sewer work, are giving employment to more than 500 persons.

About 150 persons have enrolled for commercial instruction at the high schools under the auspices of the Federal Emergency Relief Education project.

Report on CWA Projects.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—J. Milton Patterson, chairman of the Federal Relief Emergency Administration for Allegany County, has reported on activities for direct relief and CWA projects in this territory.

Patterson explained that prior to the beginning of the Civil Works Administration here in November the Relief Administration was paying out approximately $27,000 a month for direct relief. Since the CWA began operating, 724 families and 86 indviduals, in December, were given direct relief, costing a total of $3,327.43. The Administration cost was $1,875.56.

In addition to the money paid for direct relief, 13,917 pounds of pork and 4,000 pounds of butter were distributed.

Under the CWA, work is being done on 43 projects in the county. The estimated cost amounts to $176,803.05 for labor; $15,492.66 for materials, and $19,820 for truck hire, totaling $212,115.71. There are 1,611 assigned to jobs.

3 Banks Reelect Officers, Directors

Fredericksburg Institutions Hold Meetings.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—All officers and directors were reelected yesterday at the meeting of officials of three Fredericksburg banks.

The National Bank officers are H. Lewis Wallace, president and chairman of the board; A. H. Wallace, S. D. Wallace and W. W. Braxton, vice presidents; Hugh D. Scott, cashier, and George A. Scott, assistant cashier.

Officers of the Planters National Bank include W. K. Goolrick, president; J. C. Chichester and J. W. Massey, vice presidents; Paul H. Karsten, jr., cashier; Carl T. Hill, assistant cashier, and Dr. Frank H. Reichel, chairman of the board.

Officers reelected for the Commercial State Bank were George W. Shepherd, president; G. B. Wallace and G. W. Perry, vice presidents; W. Mayo Smith, cashier; Joseph L. Savage, assistant cashier, and E. M. Young, chairman of the board.

Hagerstown Guard Unit To Organize Rifle Team

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A rifle team will be organized by Company B, local National Guard unit, to participate in all indoor State matches.

A record has been established by the company, all members having qualified with automatic pistols. Capt. C. H. McCleary, commander, registered high score with 91 per cent.

Resort Books 15 Meetings.

Hot Springs, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Several thousand persons are expected here this year to attend the 15 conventions of National, Southern and State societies already booked for 1934. Six of the meetings will be in May.

Tailor Who Made Hanging Suit, Station Boy, Recall Guiteau

Post Staff Photos.

Upper, George Dieterich, Washington tailor who fitted Guiteau's death suit. Lower, Sylvester A. Breen, of Alexandria, who was in the station at the time of the shooting.

Visits to Condemned Man's Cell Found Him Calm and Polite.

Their visits to Charles J. Guiteau, the condemned assassin of President James A. Garfield, in his cell before he was hanged were recalled by George Dieterich, of Ninth street and New York avenue northwest, the tailor who fitted Guiteau for the suit in which he was executed, and Sylvester A. Breen, of Alexandria.

The leaves of many calendars fluttered back for the two oldsters, who were reminded of this historical epoch by an article on the assassination of the President which appeared in last Sunday's Post.

They are believed the only two persons now alive who viewed Guiteau, dapper and good-humored despite the shadow of the noose, which haunted his cell as he awaited death.

Easy to Fit.

The hanging suit was tailored meticulously for the man who shot President Garfield in the old Baltimore and Potomac Depot, at Sixth and B streets northwest, on July 2, 1881.

"I had little trouble in fitting Guiteau," said Dieterich yesterday. "He was rather similar to most people one tailors. He didn't seem particularly morose. But that was all long, long ago."

Breen was a station boy at the depot when a bullet fatally wounded the President.

As the Chief Executive prepared to board his train, Breen heard the crack of a pistol above the puff of wood-burning locomotives and the babble of voices. A moment later President Garfield fell into the arms of his escorts.

"I remained in the ladies' wash room during the time the President sat in a half-reclining position, supported by Mrs. Sarah V. E. White and others," Breen said.

Carried to Office.

"Mrs. White caught the President in her arms as he dropped toward the floor. From the ladies' room President Garfield was placed on a mattress and carried to the private office of the superintendent, Joseph Sharp, on the second floor, by railroad employes."

Several days later, in company with a newspaper reporter, Breen visited Guiteau in his cell.

"He was quite polite and poised," asserted Breen yesterday. "He conversed with us civilly, and seemed not at all depressed."

Battle Indorsed For Virginia's Liquor Board

Rockbridge Citizens Seek Reassessment of Real Estate.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Col. Marion S. Battle, of Roanoke, has been indorsed for appointment to the proposed liquor control authority in Virginia, by Roanoke Post, No. 3, American Legion.

A resolution provides Col. Battle's name shall be submitted to the governor, conveying the opinion of the post that he possesses necessary qualifications and experience.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Rockbridge Board of Supervisors has approved a petition signed by taxpayers of the county, to the General Assembly for immediate reassessment of real estate.

The board also declared in favor of a minnimum salary of $560 a year for teachers and a minimum school term of eight months, guaranteed by the State.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Judge Marshall R. Peterson, whose term expires as judge of the Third Judicial Circuit January 31, will have no opposition for reelection by the Legislature.

Judge Peterson succeeded Judge Jesse F. West, who became a member of the Supreme Court of Appeals nine years ago.

He presides over the circuit courts of Prince George, Greenville, Brunswick and Sussex Counties and the City of Hopewell.

Mrs. P. J. Warren Buried.

Luray, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Pamily J. Warren, 88, who died Monday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. S. Rhodes, near Baltimore, Md.

West Virginia Seeks Prison Goods Outlet

Two 'Pen' Factories Closed, Holt Asks Suspension of U. S. Act.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Attorney General Homer A. Holt was directed today by the West Virginia Legislature to request the United States Supreme Court to suspend operation of the Hawes-Cooper act restricting interstate shipment of prison-made goods.

Final action was taken by the Senate, which adopted a resolution previously passed by the House of Delegates. It was suggested by Dr. C. F. McClintic, warden of the State penitentiary, who said the Federal court had closed two prison factories and threatened to close a third.

Educational leaders of the State, including W. W. Trent, State superintendent of schools, today submitted to the Legislature a plan for imposing service charges for operation of public schools.

Ask Tax Districts.

Districts for taxing purposes only in place of present county units, in which tax levies must be uniform, were recommended. Sponsors declared this would provide $14,000,000 in direct taxes for school support.

Proposals for placing municipally owned electric light plants under the same laws as privately owned plants were submitted to the Senate Finance Committee today. They were contained in amendments offered by Representatives of the West Pennsylvania Utilities Co. to a pending bill authorizing municipalities to acquire or build their own plants and pay for them with revenue bonds to be retired from income.

An attack was made before the House Finance Committee today by B. M. Hoover, of Elkins, representing a group of lumber dealers on a pending bill to tax premious issued by insurance companies not holding State licenses. It was supported as a revenue producer by Harlan Justice, deputy State insurance commissioner, who said it would net $500,000 annually.

Printing Investigation.

A bill reducing the present six-member county court of Tyler County to three members was passed today by the House.

Speaker Ralph M. Hiner opened an inquiry today into circumstances of the printing of the Charleston charter bill. He took action on the basis of statements by Gov. Kump and House attaches that changes in the bill had been made in the printer's office. Hiner said eight sections of the bill had been stricken out without the knowledge of House officials.

Parole Increases Urged in Virginia

Crime Study Report Sees Big Savings Resulting.

Richmond, Jan. 11 (AP).—Extended use of probation and parole, and removal of jury responsibility in fixing punishments, are among the far-reaching recommendations in the report submitted to the governor and General Assembly today by its commission appointed to study the problem.

Supervision of the system by the State's department of public welfare was urged by the commission, which told the General Assembly the plan would quicken rehabilitation of offenders and result in substantial savings.

Declaring juries are not qualified to fix the sentence in criminal cases, the commission recommended that the jury merely decide the guilt or innocence of the accused, with the court fixing the penalties.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Irregularities In CWA Jobs Under Inquiry

Guy Expects to Correct Conditions in Certain Virginia Counties.

Richmond, Jan. 11 (AP).—George W. Guy, State director of the National Reemployment Service, said political and personal conditions apparently have entered into the selection of CWA workers in eight or ten Virginia counties, and these irregularities had made it necessary for him to send investigators into those counties to correct conditions.

Mr. Guy said he knew of no "corruption" in the distribution of jobs, and expressed the opinion that such irregularities as have occurred were chiefly the result of the haste with which the machinery was set up.

He said conditions complained of had been corrected in some of the counties, and he hoped soon to correct those in the others.

Fails to Name Counties.

Pointing out that 23,714 persons were placed on CWA work through his agency during the week ended January 6, and that 76,757 have been placed since November 20, Director Guy emphasized that it would be "miraculous" if there were not irregularities at some points, when placements were made in such haste through local agencies hurriedly thrown together. The National Government required the utmost speed in carrying out the program, he said.

Mr. Guy was unwilling to name the eight or ten counties he had in mind without first making a lengthy examination of his books.

His agency has general supervision over the choice of local agencies, which in turn select the men who actually get the work under the CWA program.

William A. Smith, CWA administrator for Virginia, has supervision over the approval of projects on which CWA funds are expended. When a project is certified to Mr. Guy by Mr. Smith, Mr. Guy's local agencies provide the men to do the work.

15 Projects Approved.

The Virginia Civil Works Administration yesterday approved fifteen new projects calling for a total outlay of $62,609, and providing 94,641 man-hours of work.

The projects were for Alexandria and Portsmouth cities and Lancaster, Lunenburg, Middlesex, New Kent, Greenville, Stafford and Richmond Counties.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the NRA compliance board, which is to move its offices from Norfolk here, will establish headquarters in the Central National Bank Building the first of next week. J. J. Skorup, compliance board director at Norfolk, will have charge of the office here. He is expected to bring a staff of eight or ten persons with him.

Preparations for a State-wide occupational employment and unemployment survey were under way through the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Col. Leroy Hodges, managing director of the chamber, said the survey is being conducted as an activity of the committee on employment planning and efforts will be made to develop information not at present available, upon which its work in planning to eliminate unemployment in the future may be based.

Employment Figures Given.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Nearly 1,000 men and women have obtained work through the Virginia State Employment Service since August, 1932, according to A. L. Roberts, who is in charge.

In all, the State service has registered 5,422 men and 592 women since August. The report showed that 4,488 unemployed men and 532 unemployed women registered at the bureau. The State service now supplies all workers under the CWA program in Roanoke. It also will place men on the veterans' hospital to be erected near here.

D. A. Graham, field supervisor for the United States Department of the Interior, is in Roanoke making a study of the possibility of placement i nthe public works and civil works projects of deaf persons. His work is to be completed by February 15.

$9,000 Asked for Airport.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). — An application for $9,000 grant of Federal funds for grading and otherwise improving the Bristol ton, Secretary H. W. Hodges, of the Airport has been made at Washingchamber of commerce, said today.

Sixty CWA workers, thirty from Bristol and ten each from Washington, Russell and Scott Counties, will be given Red Cross first-aid instruction here in a series of classes, the first of which was held last night at the courthouse.

Asylum Enriched By Patient's Sister

Staunton, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). The sister of a man once a patient in the Western State Hospital—asylum for the insane here—died recently, and by her will left a $20,000 estate, including a 383-acre farm on Robinson River in Madison County, to the institution.

The sister was Miss Elvira Chapman. The brother, David Chapman, of Madison County, was first committed to the hospital 35 years ago. According to Joseph S. DeJarnette, superintendent, Chapman was an "off and on" patient. He died several years ago.

Saturday a delegation of Madison County and Culpeper citizens will wait upon Dr. DeJarnette here to request the hospital to establish a colony for patients on the farm.

J. E. Webb Services Held.

Bolivar, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). The funeral of Joseph E. Webb, well-known resident of Bolivar, who died Tuesday at the age of 67, was held here today. Seven children survive.

Virginia Cities Find Rum Main Arrest Factor

Harrisonburg Had Total of 564 Last Year; 796 in Fredericksburg.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Liquor law violations caused nearly three-fifths of the 564 arrests made last year by Harrisonburg police, says the annual report of Chief Hillyer Boice.

The 305 arrests for prohibition offenses included 140 drunks and 31 drunk and disorderly. Police seized 149½ gallons of liquor during the year.

Police court meted out $7,795.50 fines and $4,192 costs and an aggregate of 10 years in jail sentences. Of those arrested, 107 were acquitted.

The past year was the first for Harrisonburg's reorganized police department, now having eight full-time officers. Former Chief Frank L. Dovel, who is starting his thirtieth year on the force, was made desk sergeant after the appointment of Chief Boice.

Fredericksburg Lists 796.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). There were 796 arrests made by this city's police department in 1933, Chief Silas B. Perry's annual report reveals.

Violations of city ordinances numbered 694, while 57 were arrested for breaking State laws and 45 held for outside authorities.

The police recovered $6,371.11 worth of the $9,155.38 property stolen here last year, in addition to seizing $1,920 property for other authorities. A total of 493 white men were seized in 1933, 26 white women, 23 colored men, and 46 colored women. About half the colored women were charged with disorderly conduct. Among the 208 atrrests for drunkenness were 167 white men, 31 colored men, 5 colored and 5 white women.

Serious State law violations included criminal assault, one arrest; highway robbery, 3; housebreaking, 5; felonious assault, 2, and murder, 1. Arrests were made for other authorities on such charges as counterfeiting, 6 arrests; grand larceny, 5, and seduction, 2.

$132,585 Taxes Unpaid.

Clifton Forge, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). At the close of 1933, city taxes and penalties amounting to $132,585.52 were still unpaid, the auditor reports. This is an increase of more than $21,000 over the unpaid taxes a year ago.

Of the total, $54,333.22 is due from 1933 taxes and represents more than one-third of the year's tax assessment; $37,764.13 is due for 1932; $23,587.96 for 1931, and $16,909.21 for 1930.

Petersburg Loss Low.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Fire losses in this city for 1933 were unusually low, according to the annual report of W. F. Miller, fire chief, filed with City Manager Henry A. Yancey.

Losses during the year totaled only $8,678, a per capita loss of less than 30 cents, figured on a population of 30,000. In 1932 the total loss was $36,733, a per capita loss of $1.22, and in 1931 the total was $73.393,or a per capita loss of $2.62.

Bristol Weddings Jump.

Bristol, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—While business in general showed losses or small gains, Dan Cupid's interests had a "boom" year gain of 37 per cent here in 1933. Weddings jumped during the year from 336 for 1932, to 463 for 1933, according to Dan Drinkard, clerk of the Corporation Court.

County Values Drop.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Reports of the Franklin County assessors reveal a valuation of county real estate of $34,025,449, as compared with the 1933 valuation of $35,272,470.

3 Architects Direct Historic Houses Survey

Campbell, of University of Virginia, One Board Member.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Edmund S. Campbell, head of the School of Art and Architecture in the University of Virginia, has been named as one of the three architects on the advisory committee that will direct the survey of Virginia's historic buildings to be carried out under the supervision of the CWA.

Thirty-three architects will be employed in making measured drawings of older buildings within the State.

Prof. Campbell hopes the entire Jeffersonian group within the university will be so measured. If this is done it will be possible to restore in every detail any of the original buildings that might be destroyed by fire or other cause.

Other architects on the Virginia advisory committee are Stanhope Johnson, of Lynchburg, and William C. Nolan, of Richmond.

For conducting the survey, which is intended to include all of the Nation's antique buildings, the sum of $500,000 has been appropriated. It is probable that the architects in Virginia will be kept busy about two months.

Work at Leesburg Starts.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Work on additions to the clerk's office and repairs on the buildings under the CWA began yesterday with a number of men employed on the projects.

Plans approved by the board of supervisors call for additions to the clerk's office at a total expenditure to the State of $4,784. Extra offices in the building will be provided for the judge of the circuit court, Commonwealth's attorney, superintendent of schools and the trial justice.

Other projects approved on which work will begin at once are repairs to the clerk's office, $1,444; repair and painting jail, $220; repair and painting buildings on the poor farm, $821, and work on the courthouse yards and walks, $572.

Approximately 200 men are now at work on streets in Round Hill, Leesburg and Purcellville, and in repairing and painting schools in the county.

The employment committee is composed of E. O. Russell, chairman; O. L. Emerick, E. L. McFarland, W. A. Metzger, T. M. Fendall and J. T. Hirst.

The board ordered the representatives to the General Assembly be requested to work for a larger appropriation from the State for the schools to relieve taxpayers of their burdens.

Safety Instruction Given.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Seventeen men are taking first-aid courses here under the tutorship of Taylor Barr, Red Cross first-aid graduate, preparatory to safety precautionary work on the Civil Works Administration projects of Winchester and Frederick and Shenandoah Counties.

They will complete the course Saturday and then go immediately on the job of lessening accidents among CWA workers. Those taking the courses are:

Winchester—Claude Hinkle, Edmund Soates, Robert L. Koontz, Edgar Seal, W. M. Sumption, C. P. McKay and Kenneth Wolingham. Frederick County—Frank H. Swimley, Frank L. Fout, Snapp Williams, and Alvin See. Shenandoah County—H. H. Waterman, Virgil Beeler, R. T. Newland, Earl Helsey, H. R. Whissen and J. M. Shannon.

Two safety supervisors and four safety inspectors have been appointed to supervise safety precautions for the men employed on Civil Works Administration projects in Shenandoah County.

H. H. Waterman, Strasburg, and James Shannon, Mount Jackson, are the safety supervisors. Safety inspectors include Earl G. Helsley, Woodstock; Virgil Beeler, Strasburg; Joseph Wissen, Edinburg, and R. T. Newland, Mount Jackson.

Luray Postoffice Gains Over 3-Month Period

Luray, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Business at the Luray postoffice made substantial gains for the last three months, compared with the same period a year ago.

Receipts were 4,136.31, as against $4,048.39, Postmaster C. M. Spitler said.

$5,000 Awarded in Suit.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.). The jury in the suit of Mrs. Caroline W. Emerling against Arlie Combs returned a verdict for $5,000. The plaintiff asked for $7,500 for injuries alleged to have been received in an automobile collision.

1,298 Licensed at Oakland.

Oakland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A total of 1,298 marriage licenses, or an average of more than three each day was issued here during 1933 to couples from 13 States. The total was 143 more than last year, but 69 less than the all-time record made in 1931.

August, the biggest month of the year, broke the all-time record for any one month with 162 licenses. December, with 131, equaled the record for that month.

87-Ft. Yacht Lindbergh Used In Baby Hunt Shipped Abroad

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—When the Baltimore Mail Line steamer City of Norfolk left the Army base for Havre, France, this afternoon it had cradled on its deck the yacht Marcon, formerly owned by Col. Charles H. Consalvo, and sold to George Levy, of Paris, France.

The Marcon, which figured in the search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby in May, 1932, was towed from its berth today and was lifted aboard the big ship by a large crane from the Navy yard.

It is believed locally this is the first time a yacht of this size, 87 feet long, has ever been shipped to Europe from America.

In a frame in the cabin of the Marcon hangs a letter from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in which the flier thanked Capt. Lackma for services redered durig the days spent aboard the yacht in quest of a contact with alleged kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby. This letter will go to France, as it proved to be of interest to Mr. Levy, whose city received Lindbergh as he landed from New York.

They are: Commonwealth Attorney S. L. Walton, $787.50; Sheriff E. L. Lucas, $787.50; Superintendent of Schools Harry B. Hanger, $870; Trial Justice John H. Booton, $1,000; Clerk of Courts G. C. Miller, $1,200; Superintendent of Alms House John A. Cave, $382; matron of the alms house, Mrs. Mamie C. Cave, $112.

Sheriff Lucas is to receive an additional $87.60 for his duties as jailer, and Clerk Miller will receive $189 as clerk of the board of supervisors.

The members of the board of supervisors fixed their own pay at $5.40 per day when they are in session, in addition to a mileage allowance while attending meetings.

Pancake Heads Farm Aid Bank In West Virginia

Romney Man Elected for 8 Counties in Region; 4-H Clubs to Meet.

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Sam R. Pancake, of Romney, was elected permanent president of the Romney Crop Production Association, new Federal Farm Aid Bank for eight eastern West Virginia counties, at the meeting of the directors.

J. C. McKown, Martinsburg, was elected vice president. The executive committee is Mr. Pancake, Mr. McKown and Carl S. Welton, of Hardy County.

Five men were up for the post of secretary, with selection deferred until a later meeting. County Agent Dennis I. Law continues to act as temporary secretary. It is understood the secretary's job will pay $50 monthly.

For inspectors David Taylor, of Petersburg, and E. C. Tabb, of Berkeley County, were mentioned. It is expected that later an inspector can be trained for each county in the Romney group.

O. B. Shockey was selected to represent Morgan County in place of M. W. Fulton, of Cherry Run, who is unable to serve.

Loudoun 4-H Club Meeting.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—4-H Club goals for 1934, announce Helen Adams, Round Hill 4-H Club president, will be selected at the meeting of the Loudoun 4-H Club council at the Leesburg High School Saturday at 10:30 a. m. Speakers will be Mrs. Lawrence Taylor, Lincoln Club leader, on "The Value of a 4-H Club Council," and Miss Matilda Garner, home demonstration agent, who will demonstrate "How to Make a Club Program."

Committees in charge of the activities of the day include Recreation, Genevieve Schneider, chairman; Frances Miller, of Lucketts, and Elizabeth Furr, Unison-Bloomfield; Luncheon, Miss Mildred Weadon, chairman; Miss Carrie Reynolds, Round Hill leader; Elizabeth Willingham, Lucketts, and Miss Bessie Phillips, Arcola, leader.

Margaret Greham will preside; Janet Patterson is song leader. Officers will be elected.

Corn-Hog Growers' Rally.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Corn and hog growers of Frederick County will assemble here January 17 to arrange for participation in the Federal corn-hog production program.

The program will be explained by George C. Herring, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Other speakers will include I. Fred Stone, county agent; Dowell J. Howard, district supervisor of agricultural education for northern Virginia, and W. R. Legge, of Handley High School.

Chairmen who will supervise operation of the program in Frederick County districts are Charles R. McCann, Stonewall; John W. Larrick, jr., Shawnee; Lee N. Whitacre, Gainesboro; C. M. Rosenberger, Back Creek, and C. I. Brumback, Opequon.

Market Session Called.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). The Eastern States Cooperative Livestock Marketing Association will hold its annual State membership meeting here January 20, at 10 a. m. The meeting was arranged by the Rockbridge Cooperative Livestock Marketing Association, W. S. Moore, manager.

L. T. Skeffington, manager of the Eastern, and Paul Fletcher, manager of the branch at Jersey City, will be present. Reports, plans, and election of two Virginia directors will feature the meeting. This is the first time the State membership meeting has been held here.

Maryland Road Plans Studied

Supervisors Meet With Field Men at Frederick in Annual Session.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—State roads commission supervisors and field men of the district comprising Frederick, Carroll, Howard and Montgomery Counties met in annual session at the State armory today, with District Engineer Thomas M. Linthicum presiding.

Approximately 60 persons attended. Addresses were made by Robert H. Reindollar, assistant chief engineer and Charles B. Bryant, material engineer of the State Roads Commission.

Problems of State and county work under the public works administration and the Civil Works Administration were studied. Types of projects, specifications, and wages to be paid, were explained.

Mr. Reindollar reviewed new construction, repairs and relocations. Mr. Bryant spoke on specifications.

Two Confess Theft and Return Of Securities Worth $14,000

West Virginians Are Held For Morgan County Grand Jury.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—With the arrest and alleged confession today of Wyatt Keesecker, 21, and Ralph B. Somers, 23, officers said they had solved the theft and the subsequent return of $14,000 in securities from Charles E. Householder, farmer, near here December 21.

Somers and Keesecker, unable to furnish $1,000 bond, were committed to jail here for grand jury action in April.

Both confessed, police reported, saying Somers learned the hiding-place of the papers, beneath a parlor table, while calling on a daughter in the family, and the papers were taken while the family was absent. Sale of the securities was balked when they learned of a police inquiry. The papers were returned to the home of a neighbor last Saturday evening.

Paul Somers, said to be a brother of Ralph, was quizzed in the case following arrest for another theft at Sleepy Creek, but was cleared of any connection.

The bond theft was the largest recorded in Morgan County in many years. State and local officers cooperated in the investigation.

Blue Ridge Hunt Club Lists Month's Program

January 13, Woodley; 15, Chapel Hill; 17, Chilly Hollow; 20, Glenvin; 22, Summerville; 24, Edward Lee's Gate; 27, Carter Hall; 29, Red Gate; 31, Deerfield. All meets will begin at 11 a. m.

Veterans Urge Limiting CWA Help to Needy

Fredericksburg Men Ask All Persons to Guard Against Misuse.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—No one not actually in need of help should receive Federal recovery aid, according to a resolution passed by the Bowen-Franklin-Knox Post, American Legion, last night.

Presided over by William Jackson, the legionnaires declared the Government some time ago withdrew financial assistance from disabled veterans, thereby saving $300,000,000, and since that time the Government has spent many times this amount saved in assisting various classes of people, principally the unemployed.

The resolution asks "all classes of citizens to guard against improper use of funds and see that no persons receive any part of such relief funds unless they qualify under the requirements of the economic need for which CWA was created."

Two Civil Works projects were initiated here yesterday, making a total of five projects under way here. For the extension of sewer mains into Mayfield and to the site of the proposed colored high school building in Gunnery Field 32 men and 2 foremen were employed.

Women Quizzed on Health.

Danville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Ten women enumerators today began Danville's health survey, suggested by City Health Officer R. W. Garnett, and approved as an emergency relief project.

The enumerators will visit 5,000 homes in Danville and will ask the mothers 113 questions, including these:

Do you think married people should be supplied reliable information on birth control? Do you seriously learn how to prevent disease? Does your family usually have meals together? Do more than two sleep in a bed? Does any member of the family have pains in the feet? What use is made of your leisure time? Do your children sleep between the sheets?

Busines Survey Begins.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—James I. Joyner, supervisor of the business center for the Sixth District of Virginia, has established his offices in the postoffice building and enumerators have started work in Petersburg and nearby counties.

The district includes the cities of Petersburg and Hopewell and the counties of Amelia, Brunswick, Chesterfield, Powhatan, Dinwiddie, Greensville, Nottoway, Prince George, Southampton, Surrey and Sussex.

Virginian Aids Accused Wife

Visits Woman Held in Death of Girl in "Eternal Triangle" Case.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). Although he declined to give up his attachment for Mrs. Elsie Barksdale Ray, waitress, before she was slain here Tuesday night, William P. Casey, 40, of Stony Point, has indicated he will support his attractive 37-year-old wife when she goes to trial in the girl's death.

He was allowed to see his wife at the jail this morning for the first time since the shooting, and the couple talked in the presence of John H. Jones, the jailer.

Funeral services for Mrs. Ray were held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Holy Cross Episcopal Chapel near Batesville, where her family lives, by the Rev. Roy Mason, and burial made in the church cemetery.

The calmness Mrs. Casey displayed following the shooting was shattered today. She wept as she talked about the "triangle" situation which led to the slaying. Her attorneys did not indicate a plan of defense. Other persons here pointed out she had received treatment from Dr. David Wilson, psychiatrist at the University Hospital.

3 Liberal Proposals Fought by Methodists

Richmond, Jan. 11 (AP).—Resolutions opposing State dispensaries, the opening of theaters on Sunday and legalized pari-mutuel betting on horseracing were unanimously adopted here yesterday at a one-day rally of Methodists of the Virginia Conference.

The resolutions, which Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon described as "the true attitude of the Methodist Church South," will be presented to the General Assembly.

Roanoke Lacks $797 To Obtain Seal Quota

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—With $2,703 collected on the annual Christmas seal campaign, the Roanoke Tuberculosis Association is seeking to collect $797 needed to attain the goal.

The budget committee will meet tomorrow to outline 1934 work. The annual election meeting will be held later this month.

Virginia Court Right to Judge Lawyer Upheld

Trial Ordered on Legal Conduct Both in and Outside State.

Richmond, Jan. 11 (AP).—A Virginia court has authority to take disciplinary action against an attorney licensed to practice before it although the alleged cause for action may not have occurred before it, the State Court of Appeals held today.

This decision in a Norfolk case was handed down by the high court today among 30 opinions made public on the first opinion day of the winter term.

Court Decision Reversed.

The Norfolk-Portsmouth Bar Association had brought proceedings against W. Shepherd Drewry alleging unprofessional conduct, part of which took place in Norfolk and part in North Carolina. A statutory court of three judges in Norfolk dismissed the case. The bar association took an appeal. The high court reversed the statutory court, and remanded the case for trial on its merits.

An act of 1932 was held unconstitutional by the court in an opinion in the case of the Commonwealth vs. the National Fire Insurance Co. of Hartford. The high court affirmed the opinion of the trial court that the 1932 act levying a special tax against companies underwriting fire and lightning insurance in Virgiina—the revenue therefrom to be used for the relief of injured firemen and dependents of firemen killed in line of duty—was unconstitutional.

Guilty Plea Bans Jury.

In an opinion in a Lynchburg case—Clemson Dixon vs. the Commonwealth—the court held that the Virginia constitution makes it mandatory that when a defendant pleads guilty to a criminal charge the court shall try without the intervention of a jury.

In the case of Roller vs. the Commonwealth from the Smyth County Circuit Court, the Supreme Court reversed the judgment of a trial court on the basis of remarks made by the Commonwealth's attorney in addressing the jury. The high court held that the Commonwealth's attorney's remarks constituted conduct such as could not be cured by admonition to the jury which was given by the trial court.

Marion Mayor Resigns.

Choral Singers Plan Brahm's "Requiem"

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—Singing of Brahm's "Requiem" in connection with the centenary of the composer, will feature the annual Virginia Choral Festival at the University of Virginia in April, it was announced today.

Rehearsals are already under way, members of the committee pointing out that concentrated work is necessary, as the music is more difficult than any attempted in previous festivals.

Staunton Fair Earned $1,118 In 21 Years

No Dividend Ever Paid, Says Statement of Secretary.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 11 Spl.). There's not so much money in the fair business, if figures released by the Shenandoah Valley Fair Association are to be taken as a criterion.

Secretary Charles B. Ralston has prepared a financial statement covering the 21 years the fair here has been giving its annual exhibition. During that period, total receipts have been $482,814 and disbursements $481,696, the net earnings being $1,118.

Since the founding of the association in 1913, according to Secretary Ralston, not a penny in dividends has been paid to stockholders.

The banner year for gate receipts was 1920 when $19,365 was passed into the ticket offices; the low year was 1932, the receipts being only $5,665. Season tickets were purchased to the extent of $3,616 in 1920, while the low year of 1931 saw the sale of only $227 worth.

The largest year from the standpoint of receipts was 1926, when $37,636.19 came in, compared with the leanest year of 1917. Receipts that year were $11,423.54. The largest disbursement was in 1925—$42,040.71; the smallest, $9,220.89, in 1913, the first year of the fair here. Last year the expenditures totaled $11,554.65. Receipts were $10,996.11.

With the exception of the Virginia State Fair, at Richmond, the Staunton exhibition is generally rated as the largest in the State.

Danville Woman Dies, Leaves New-Born Baby

Danville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Gladys M. Francisco, 33, who died yesterday at Memorial Hospital.

Hamm Ouster Case Is Rushed

Albemarle County Snarl to Be Aired Tuesday in High Court.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.). The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals will hear arguments Tuesday in the mandamus action seeking to oust G. Stuart Hamm, Albemarle County treasurer, who refuses to relinquish his office to Henry A. Haden, county executive, according to notices received here today by attorneys in the case.

Mr. Haden was appointed county executive by the county supervisors several months ago in the reorganized county executive form of government. Among his other duties, he was to serve as county treasurer. When he prepared to assume office January 1, Mr. Hamm refused to vacate. Since that time both have been serving as treasurer.

Briefs will be filed and orally argued. The petition for a writ of mandamus was filed with the court last Tuesday by John S. Graves, representing the supervisors. An answer also was filed by Lyttleton Waddell, of Charlottesville, counsel for Hamm.

Scheduling of the hearing within a week of presentation of the case is unusually fast procedure for the supreme court.

Speed has been requested by both parties to the suit, in view of the fact that the financial dealings of the county are now divided between Mr. Hamm and Henry A. Haden, county executive.

West Virginia CWA Safety Plan Launched

Supervisory Engineers Are Appointed; Relief Group to Meet.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A State-wide safety program for 30,000 employes on CWA projects in West Virginia has been launched by C. A. Bundick, State director of safety.

Dividing the State into five districts, Bundick has appointed four safety supervisory engineers, with another to be named later, and has authorized them to appoint safety inspectors for all CWA projects needing them. About 200 will be named.

The supervisory engineers appointed are A. E. Hahn, Charleston; George A. Duncan, Welch; Eli J. Mason, Charleston, and Joseph Reed, Fairmont.

Providing jobs for 1,132 persons, 44 additional projects in 21 counties of West Virginia have been approved by the State CWA.

Among the projects is the establishment of a "woman's center" at the State capital, to which 42 persons were assigned. Their principal duty will be that of finding employment for jobless women.

Other projects include street and school improvements at Richwood for 48 men, street and wall work and two sewing projects in Roane County for 236 persons; street work, a sanitary survey and stone-quarrying in Kanawha County for 156 persons, landscaping and highway work in Summers County for 119 men, road construction in Mingo for 60 men, highway work in Monroe for 50 men, similar work in Randolph for 72 men and road grading in Pendleton for 50.

Contracts for construction of the first bridge across the Kanawha River between Charleston and its confluence with the Ohio at Point Pleasant have been awarded by the town of St. Albans, which has obtained PWA funds for the purpose.

The superstructure contract went to the McClintic-Marshall Co., of Bethlehem, Pa., at $158,607, and the substructure award to E. R. Mills, of Charleston, at $95,405.

The bridge will be operated on the toll basis until the Federal loan is repaid, when it will be made a free bridge.

CWA Officials to Gather.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A State convention of all county CWA officials and other relief workers has been called for January 15 and 16 at the Waldo Hotel here by William N. Beehler, of Charleston, deputy Federal relief administrator.

Maj. Francis W. Turner, of Charleston, State relief administrator, is arranging the program which will be devoted to emergency administration fact-finding and plans for operations.

Beehler reports the CWA pay roll in the State for the week ending January 5 totaled $949,268 with 29,667 persons employed. Expenditures of CWA funds up to January 11 in the State aggregated $3,094,346, not including materials contracted for.

Letting of road and bridge projects under a Federal grant of $4,474,000 to the State has been tentatively set for January 28 by Ernest L. Bailey, State road commissioner. The exact date depends upon approval of bridges and projects at Fairmont and Logan now in Federal hands.

If approved, the Logan Bridge will be constructed across the Guyandotte River and the Fairmont Bridge across Buffalo Creek. Another large bridge at Wheeling also is contemplated by the State highway department, but plans have not yet been submitted for Federal approval. It would cost about $300,000.

Most of the remaining funds under the grant will be consumed in the letting, Bailey says, in the event of approval of the pending projects. The exceptions are the $300,000 for the Wheeling bridge and a reserve funds for unexpected costs in connection with projects already let. More than $1,000,000 of the grant remains.

The State expects to receive soon, in addition, about $500,000 of a grant and loan of nearly $5,000,000 from the PWA. It will be the first allocation of this sum, 70 per cent of which will be secured by State highway bonds and the remainder will be a direct grant.

More than half the original grant is now under contract, giving employment to 3,712 men on 47 projects calling for construction of 98.8 miles of roads and 16 bridges. The projects call for a total expenditure of $2,308,010 in 22 counties, exclusive of $454,033 expected to be spent on projects on which bids have been opened, but for which contracts have not been let.

Fathers Guests at P.-T. A. Meeting

Session in Fredericksburg Hears Several Talks.

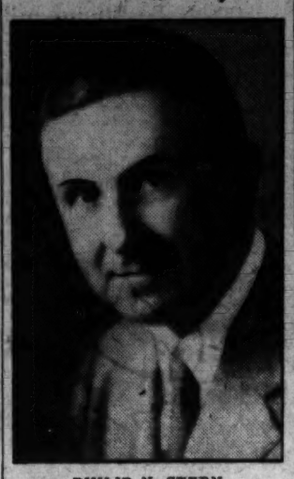
The Rev. Richard V. Lancaster, master of ceremonies, introduced Prof. Oscar H. Darter, of Fredericksburg State Teacher's College, who spoke on "What the Parents' Attitude Should Be Toward the Child's Study at Home."

Other speakers were Miss Ethel Nash, elementary school superintendent; Mrs. Mary Freeman, and W. F. Carter, jr., Milford Berner, professional football player; Ray C. Hopkins, and the Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman.

Services Conducted For Miss Elsie Powell

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Miss Elsie Colbert Powell were held today at Belmont, the Rev. Robert F. Caverlee and the Rev. Mr. Saunders officiating.

Directs Survey



PHILIP N. STERN, Fredericksburg architect, president of the Virginia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects and a member of the Virginia Fine Arts Commission, who has been appointed by Secretary Ickes as district officer of the Historic American Building Survey for Virginia. A district advisory committee not yet selected will assist in compiling a list of buildings to be surveyed, while 32 assistants to Mr. Stern will be selected through the CWA employment office in this district.

Lectures Set At Virginia U.

Developments in Arts and Sciences Are to Be Treated.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Developments in arts and sciences will be treated in six lectures by University of Virginia professors at Madison Hall at 8 o'clock on Wednesday evenings during January and February.

The addresses are under the auspices of the university committee on public lectures, of which Dr. James Southall Wilson is chairman. They will mark a resumption of a lecture series that was discontinued during the past three years.

The schedule of lectures, as announced by Prof. Stringfellow Barr, follows:

January 17—Dr. Scott Buchanan, professor of philosophy, "The Present State of Intellectual Arts."
February 7—Dr. Peter Van De Kamp, assistant professor of astronomy, "Shaping the Universe."
February 14—Dr. Robert Kent Gooch, professor of political science, "Liberty in the Modern World."
February 21—Garrard Glenn, professor of law, "The Law of Evidence."

School Wins Fee For Non-Resident

Jury at Fredericksburg Awards Tuition.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A jury in Corporation Court today ordered J. P. Simpson, garage man, to pay $71.25 in tuition fees to the City School Board for the attendance of Simpson's children in city public schools.

Judge Frederick W. Coleman instructed the jury that if the jury believed Simpson's children did not reside within the city limits at the time the tuition bill was incurred the jury must find for the school board, even though Simpson were found to be a qualified voter of Fredericksburg.

Mr. Simpson's attorney contended that as a taxpayer of Fredericksburg, Mr. Simpson was entitled to send his children to school here free of charge. The board was represented by S. Bernard Coleman and Francis B. Gouldman.

La Plata Plans Sewer System

Town Must Raise $6,000 to Get CWA Fund.

La Plata, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The La Plata Board of Town Commissioners is considering a $31,000 sewer system, which is projected to serve the community and its environs, caring for the future growth of the town.

Negotiations already are under way in the office of the State engineer, Baltimore, through J. Spence Howard, of Baltimore, a private engineer, concerning the construction of the system.

To benefit from the offer of the CWA, which has made the system possible, La Plata must raise $6,000, to match the $25,000 the CWA will furnish.

Lynchburg Team Plans 8 Debates

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—Twelve debates with eight schools have been scheduled tentatively for the Lynchburg College team, Dr. John L. Davis, counsellor, has announced. All of the meetings will be in the second semester.

Germany's withdrawal from the disarmament conference is the most popular question, with five schools listed for this topic. "Federal Ownership and Operation of Hydroelectric Power Projects," "The Increase of Presidential Powers as a Settled Policy," and "The Federal Ownership and Operation of Radio Broadcast Facilities" are other questions.

B. & O. Fears Landslide.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. for fear of a landslide that would block its tracks, has started removal of a threatening hillside on the Paw Paw-Magnolia cut-off east of Cumberland.

Raiders Claim Modern Stills Use Electricity

Two Found in Maryland Homes Up to Date, They Declare.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The use of electricity in "cooking" by moonshiners is the newest fad here, according to William R. Harvey of the U. S. Alcoholic Beverage Unit, assisted by Howard P. Loughrie, U. S. deputy marshal, who staged several raids.

At the premises of Golden B. Nixon, they said they found a 100-gallon still and a 25-gallon still in operation, the smaller being heated by electricity, the first of its type yet found. Also seized were 12 barrels of mash and 101 gallons of distillate. Edna D. Nixon, the wife, was released on bond by U. S. Commissioner Thomas J. Anderson, and her husband and Lawson Nixon, of Oldtown, being absent, were cited to appear.

Cecil Crowe, Westernport, was released on $1,500 bond. The officers say they found a 50-gallon still hidden under a stairway with a sliding wall. Three barrels of mash, 30 gallons of white liquor, an electric aging machine, charcoal chips and much equipment also were seized.

Man Jailed in Charge.

Middletown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Justice Walter Shifler, Boonsboro, last night committed John O'Neal, west of Middletown, to the Washington County Jail in default of $500 bail, to await grand jury action. O'Neal was charged with securing money from Scott Snook, a merchant of Halfway, Washington County, under false pretenses. O'Neal also was charged with using the name of a Mr. Smith, of near Jefferson, in securing the money.

Dog Suits Continue.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The first perjury case in Berkeley County in some years promises to furnish still another angle of a long-drawn-out legal fight for possesion of a hunting dog.

William Cole, jr., will be arraigned this week on a charge that the testimony he gave in two hearings before two justices of the peace in different angles of the dog case were contradictory. The suit, familiar to local magistrates, started some time ago when O. W. Fowler, this city, claimed that a dog in possession of William Cole, jr., was the one he had lost. He sued for recovery and the junior Cole testified he had purchased the dog from a relative.

Fowler, awarded the dog, was sued before another justice by H. C. Lamp, who claimed the dog was his. At this trial, the younger Cole allegedly testified he had stolen the dog near the Lamp home, and had not bought it, as he had previously testified. Lamp won the dog, but Fowler cited the Cole boy for perjury, on which charge the boy will be tried before a third justice.

Will Contest Resumes.

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 11 (AP).—Hearings will be resumed tomorrow on the pleas of two brothers contesting the will of their sister, Mrs. Carl F. Martin, claiming she was mentally incapable of disposing of her $250,000 estate.

The brothers, who also charge outside influence played a part in the drawing of the will, are Joseph M. Moore, of Elmira, N. Y., and Charles R. Moore, of Warren, Pa. The case, being heard in the Marion County Court, was recessed Tuesday.

Mrs. Martin, for many years a Fairmont resident, died a few weeks ago, leaving the bulk of her property to James H. Thomas, who had charge of the Martin estate, and Mrs. Thomas.

Naming of Tie Candidate To County Court Asked

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A petition with 600 signers has been forwarded to Charleston asking this district's two State senators, Robert S. White and J. C. Helsley, of Berkeley Springs, to appoint either J. C. McKown or W. M. Johnson to the vacant membership on Berkeley County Court, here.

The post was vacated through the tie in the 1932 vote for these two candidates. This bill passed the House, but the senators earlier indicated their intention of amending it to allow the governor to appoint whom he wished.

Lease Speeds Airport Plans In Martinsburg

City Takes Over Field So Federal Loan May Be Available.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Shepherd Field, airport near here which is being pushed as a station on American Airways route West via Charleston, W. Va., has been leased by this city for five years from Berkeley Aviation Club, with the option of buying it for $3,000.

The action was taken so the field might qualify for a CWA loan for the improvement of the field, to bring it up to Government standards and standards of the airways company.

It is understood that with the leasing of the field by the city, approval of a $17,000 loan by CWA is assured, since fields improved under such loans must be under direction of a political subdivision.

Improvements will include leveling the field, construction of a second 3,000-foot runway and lighting.

The city assumes a maximum expense of $400 a year for maintenance, and will receive the field's revenues.

Mrs. J. R. Kirk, of Romney, supervisor of the special NRA business census in nine eastern West Virginia counties, today appointed these assistants in three counties: Miss Elizabeth Sperow and Miss Isabelle Miller, Martinsburg enumerators, and Miss Tenna F. Tabler, to make the survey in Berkeley County; Hosmer M. Beller, of Charles Town, enumerator for Charles Town and Ranson, with Miss Myra Moler in Jefferson County; Miss Margaret Ambrose to have charge of Morgan County.

Farm Survey Active.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Good progress has been made in Randolph County in the farm housing survey, undertaken by the Department of Agriculture under a special CWA appropriation.

About 300 homes have been visited by field workers in little more than a week and their reports are being tabulated by office clerks almost as rapidly as they are filed.

Keyser Projects Begun.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A CWA project calling for an initial labor supply of 87 men was begun in Keyser yesterday. The work calls for installation of storm sewers on Fort avenue and Center street.

Additional men will be put to work on these projects as fast as the supplies arrive. About 150 men will get work in all.

The sealing of abandoned mines in Mineral County also will use 27 miners from Elk district.

Forest Road Started.

Thomas, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Work has started on the Jennington-Red Creek road, a Government project in the Monongahela National Forest.

The road will connect two major roads in the forest. The Dry Fork road that leads from Hendricks will connect with the Jennington road at Red Creek and the new road will follow Big Run Creek to Jennington, where it will make connection with the Alpena road in Randolph County.

A $40,000 bridge will be constructed over Dry Fork River at Jennington.

Teachers Get Work.

Kingwood, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Employment will be provided for every idle teacher in Preston County under the CWA program. Already 20 have been given work.

Most will work in high schools. J. H. Hundley, Ocelia Jones and Ethel Watson will be employed in the county superintendent's office.

Mrs. John Davis will be the physical education director in the Preston County High School. Daniel Shaffer will be the maintenance assistant.

Church to Serve Supper.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—A turkey and oyster supper and dance will be held at St. Joseph's Church, Morganza, on the evening of January 20.

Walter C. Carter Rites Conducted

Three Ministers Take Part in Services.

Front Royal, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Walter C. Carter, 47, banker and landowner, who was killed in a crossing accident on the Southern Railroad near here Tuesday morning, were held from the residence today.

Services were conducted by the Rev. T. Eugene West, pastor of the Baptist Church. He was assisted by the Rev. R. B. Claggett, of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. Dr. H. W. Shannon, of the Presbyterian Church.

Pallbearers were J. Frank Forsyth, Hubert H. Marlow, S. Byrne Downing, sr., Henry C. Coe, Joseph L. Borden and B. J. Hilldige. Interment was in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Harpers Ferry Rites For Joseph E. Webb

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Services were held here today for Joseph E. Webb, 67, lifelong resident here, for many years a scale inspector for the B. & O. Railroad, who died here Tuesday after a brief illness of erysipelas.

Surviving are one sister and two brothers, Mrs. Minnie Weber, of Newark, N. J.; James T. Webb, of Baltimore, and George T. Webb, of Washington, and the following children: Mrs. Rohe Meyer, Montclair, N. J.; Mrs. Morgan Levy, Orange, N. J.; Mrs. George Lincoln, Youngstown, Ohio; Mrs. Harry Ensor, Frederick, Md.; Mary, Edgar and Charles, at home.

Anne Arundel County Commissioner Named

Annapolis, Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Gov. Ritchie today appointed and commissioned William W. Townsend, of Davidsonville, member of the board of commissioners for Anne Arundel County, to succeed W. Tudor Jones, also of Davidsonville, who died several weeks ago.

Hampton Roads Pollution Grows

Commission Asks Fund of $7,000,000 or More.

Richmond, Jan. 11 (AP).—A warning that the entire Hampton Roads area ultimately will be condemned as polluted unless the General Assembly, through legislation, provides relief for the situation was expressed in the report of the governor's commission named to study the problem.

The report, laid before the General Assembly at its opening session, said the commission by unanimous action had applied to the Public Works Administration, through the State advisory board, for $7,000,000 or more of Federal funds for construction of facilities to prevent or lessen pollution.

Accompanying the report was legislation suggested by the commission which would establish a permanent pollution control body vested with authority to regulate and prevent pollution of tidal waters: to issue bonds for construction, erection and maintenance of sewage disposal plants and to require all persons contributing sewage within its jurisdiction to connect with and utilize sewage disposal facilities.

Mae West Curves Bring Prize at Student Dance

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—That the Mae West influence has been felt by the "Southern Gentlemen" at the University of Virginia was indicated in a dance held here tonight, under the auspices of the new Student Union.

It was a Bowery dance. Prizes were awarded for the best imitations of Mae West and Steve Brodie.

Here's a Challenge:

IF YOU RIDE THE STREET CARS AND THE BUSES REGULARLY, HOW MUCH WILL THE NEW UNIVERSAL TRANSFER AND THE WEEKLY PASS SAVE YOU?
IF YOU USE A HIGH-COST MODE OF TRANSPORTATION, CAN YOU SAVE BY RIDING THE STREET CARS AND BUSES OFTENER?
BY 4TH OF JULY YOU WILL HAVE MADE A GOOD SAVING. HOW MUCH?
BY NEXT CHRISTMAS WHAT PRESENT OF VALUE CAN YOU BUY WITH THE SAVING?

● The saving one can make by using street cars and buses instead of driving a car to and from work is astonishing. It can easily be built up to ninety or one hundred dollars a year.

Take the case of a man who lives between three and four miles from work. If he drives his own auto his transportation cost per day, figured at 7c a mile, is roughly 50c or $3.00 a week.

Twelve cash fare rides on street cars or buses would amount to $1.20. That would mean a saving of $1.80 over the personal vehicle cost; an annual saving of $90.00.

The same man if he used tokens for his rides would spend 90c going to and from work, saving thereby $2.10 a week compared with the cost of driving his car. That would mean $105.00 saved in a year.

Capital Transit weekly passes make street car and bus riding more economical than ever. The $1.00 or $1.25 pass permit unlimited riding in the District of Columbia from early Sunday to early the following Sunday. With one of these passes your saving could clearly be made quite large, depending upon how often you rode with us. Figure it out for yourself.

Quotations From Washington.

It is perhaps too much to hope that some day an advocate of isolation will embroider the theme in public without using as his text that historic passage from Washington's farewell address: "The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible."

And it is also perhaps too much to hope that some day a speaker on this theme will arise with sufficient intellectual honesty—and knowledge of Washington's political philosophy—to cap the above quotation with another from the writings of our first President. Certainly it is equally worth recalling that Washington foresaw a future "when, our institutions being firmly consolidated and working with complete success, we might safely and perhaps beneficially take part in the consultations held by foreign states for the advantage of the nations."

Senator Borah, in his trenchant speech to the Council on Foreign Relations last Monday night, spoke as though the foreign policy which was judicious in the eighteenth century must by that token be the judicious policy today. It is useful to recall that, judging by his published writings, Washington himself would have denied any such static concept, so contradictory to the dynamic character of a changing civilization.

Miami In The Season.

Nobody but a low-flung person minus the proper sensibilities would attribute any but the most patriotic motives to the House Military Affairs Committee, which has approved a trip to Miami for its members, providing an Army airplane to accommodate the party is available. The decision on that point is up to the President.

The committeemen make it clear that what they want to do is to inspect Chapman Field to determine the feasibility of converting it "into the first of a series of Army sea frontier bases." A Senate committee has just come back from the Pacific Coast, on a somewhat similar mission, and will perhaps give the country the comforting assurance that our fortifications and our flag are still there. Manifestly, somebody ought to see about the Atlantic fortifications, particularly in territory so exposed to potential invasion from Haiti, Cuba, the Bahamas and even Bermuda.

It is purely fortuitous, of course, that this is the season in Miami and Palm Beach, and that if one is so inclined, one may gambol on the green and frisk on the beach. And, of course, it is the purest coincidence that at just about the moment the big Army plane would be set down on Chapman Field the National Air races would begin.

Of course, it would cost the Government nothing, except the estimated $200 an hour for the big plane, because everything is to be provided free. But the country still has a headache from reading the last bill for a Congressional junket to Florida. A committee that went down to inspect the Everglades found they were still there and would make a nice park, but it took drawing rooms, hotel suites, big bills for mineral waters, glass-bottomed boats, house boats, a blimp and several thousand dollars to prove it.

Ford Appraises The NRA.

Henry Ford's much-heralded opposition to the NRA turns out to be a mere difference of opinion as to how the objectives of that agency should be attained. The Detroit manufacturer is not, out of sympathy with the ideals behind this mainspring of the recovery effort. On the contrary, his chief criticism of the NRA, as revealed in an interview with Harold N. Denny, of the New York Times, is that it does not go far enough and is not yet as effective as he would like to see it become.

"Up to the present time we have believed absolutely in the ideal behind the NRA," Mr. Ford says. "But the NRA hasn't tackled the fundamentals yet. There's been too much selfishness in the support of it." Although he has refused to sign the automobile code, Mr. Ford believes that the NRA is trying to accomplish what his firm set out to do twenty years ago. Apparently his reasons for keeping aloof from the code, even though he is complying with its provisions, have been misunderstood in Washington.

Mr. Ford gives credit to the NRA for its constructive achievements without indorsing all of its current activities. He doubts that the NRA has substantially increased purchasing power, but he thinks "the attacks on the sweatshops and on child labor are excellent." In other words, the manufacturer who has been placed at the head of the list of NRA dissentors seeks only to view the recovery program objectively, separating its constructive aspects from the inevitable mistakes which critics are prone to emphasize.

Neither prejudice against, nor blind enthusiasm for, the NRA will serve its fundamental purpose of furthering the ideal of orderly self-government in industry. Mr. Ford's inclination to support the larger objectives of the recovery act, even though he doubts the effectiveness of some of its provisions in lifting American industry to a higher plane, is a commendable example to many who are unable to see the wood because of the trees.

The St. Lawrence Project.

The St. Lawrence navigation and power project has reached perhaps the final stage of discussion and controversy. The Senate has been asked by the President to ratify the treaty with Canada, which was indorsed last spring by a majority of the Committee on Foreign Relations. If approved by the necessary two-thirds majority it will then, in due course, presumably be submitted to the Canadian Parliament for ratification.

This stupendous undertaking is in no sense a party issue. Its consideration was inaugurated under the Coolidge administration, and its leading official advocate from the time it was first proposed by Detroit commercial interests in 1919 has been Mr. Herbert Hoover. The alignment of Senators on the issue is quite without reference to political affiliation. For example, the leader of the opposition is Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, from New York, who is one of the stanchest supporters of the President's general program.

The most active political support for the project comes from the Northwestern States, from Michigan to Montana; the most active opposition comes from Eastern States, particularly the Middle Atlantic group. The Northwest approves because the scheme has held out the promise of vast savings in the cost of transportation; the East is against it because of the implied threat to the commercial supremacy of Buffalo and of Atlantic ports. The Mississippi Valley looks with more favor upon the Lakes-to-Gulf route and Chicago fears the diversion of lake water.

Much of the opposition is, however, based on the conviction that the project is economically unsound. When it was first conceived there was congestion of railway facilities and transportation rates from the Midwest to the Atlantic seaboard were very high. Since 1923, however, the need for additional transportation facilities has disappeared and has been replaced by a need for more traffic—to prevent the bankruptcy of railway companies. In recent years, moreover, grain, which has always been looked upon as constituting the great bulk of the potential St. Lawrence traffic, has been declining as an export commodity.

It is contended by detached scientific students that the full cost of the project will greatly exceed the figures ordinarily given. This is not because the cost estimates of the engineers are challenged, but because of items omitted, such as interest during the period of construction and the cost of deepening lake harbors. With all costs included it is contended that the total bill is likely to be between $800,000,000 and $1,000,000,000, with the United States carrying considerably more than half the burden.

Since 1929 transportation rates between Chicago and Duluth and the coast have been very greatly reduced. The report of the National Transportation Committee, of which Mr. Coolidge was chairman, concluded that savings from the St. Lawrence project would be restricted to those incident to the elimination of trans-shipment. To save the equivalent of a cent or two to a bushel on grain and other traffic, a burden in the form of annual interest and maintenance charges of something like 5 or 6 cents a bushel would, it is contended, be imposed upon the taxpayers.

On the power side, also, changing conditions appear to have lessened the advantages of the project—at least for the present. The great reduction in the cost of steam power in recent years has lessened the potential savings from water power and decreased the radius over which St. Lawrence power could be marketed in competition with steam-generated current. The great industrial changes which have occurred have tempered our estimates of the probable rate of expansion and rendered the supply of existing water and steam power adequate to our requirements for some years to come.

Whatever the precise merits of these arguments, it is evident that with the passage of time since this engaging enterprise was first proposed great changes have occurred which now challenge its economic validity.

A "Renovized" White House.

The House Appropriations Committee is considering the inclusion of an item of $50,000 for White House repairs, although no funds for that purpose were requested in the budget message. The President's restraint is commendable, no doubt, but in this case it may be more economical in the long run to spend $50,000 than to save it.

Owners of private houses and other buildings have been importuned to make needed repairs and improvements without delay in order to provide work for the unemployed and at the same time obtain the benefits of low costs. If the advice to "do it now" is sound when directed toward owners of private property it seems doubly applicable to the Government as an owner of public buildings which are possessions of the Nation.

It would be false economy to permit the White House to deteriorate for lack of prompt repairs. Apart from the fact that repairs deferred grow as a consequence of neglect, certain intangible losses have to be debited against a policy of postponement. A building which houses the President of the United States ought not to present a shabby, dejected aspect to the eyes of many thousands of eager tourists who make Washington the Mecca of their pilgrimages. Popular pride in buildings and monuments which are in a very special sense the property of the people is a psychological asset which we can not afford to impair for the sake of reducing a $10,000,000,000 budget by $50,000.

Tension In Austria.

Pressed and harassed from all sides, Austria's diminutive Chancellor Dollfuss has begun what appears to be a last stand against the rising tide of Nazi-ism in his tiny republic. No statesman in the world at the moment is under more political crossfire than the pious little man who directs, with a claim of divine guidance, the destinies of this strategically vital country.

Dollfuss' fight to stem the spread of the Nazi ideal is not a simple clash with opposing political opinion. It is a complicated matter with ramifications in every foreign office in Europe. Economically Austria is not self-sustaining. Territorially she is, as the gay Viennese say, "only big enough to afford a good morning's walk around her frontiers." From the military viewpoint she is unimportant. But politically Austria is perhaps the most valuable pawn in the European diplomatic game.

Germany desires union with her to augment the Pan-German state. Italy opposes the Anschluss because it would bring Germany to the Brenner Pass and imperil Italian control of Trieste. France opposes Austro-German union almost as a matter of principle and the Little Entente allies are strenuous enough in their opposition to threaten war. They fear that an enlarged and more effective Germany would demand restoration of territory taken from the once-powerful Austro-Hungarian Empire. By underwriting loans to Austria England has incurred heavy commitments in favor of the present republic. Sir John Simon made it clear in the House of Commons shortly before Christmas that England would look with grave concern upon any dictatorship (meaning Nazi dictatorship) in Austria.

No matter how much they differ on other matters, the former allies are at one in their determination not to allow Austria to get under Nazi control. The Vatican is sympathetic to this attitude, because of what happened to Catholicism in Germany and because Dollfuss is of the conservative Austrian Catholic party. The pastoral letter of the bishops, issued at Christmas time, made it clear that they subscribed to the Dollfuss policy.

It is no secret that Dollfuss is held in power largely by foreign influence. At home he is pressed by the western provinces—Tyrol, Salzburg and Vorarlberg—who have suffered heavily by the German ban upon tourists into Austria, and desire a composition of the differences. Even the loyal Tyrolese are demanding a truce. The Socialists, who have controlled Vienna since 1918, oppose the Nazis but love Dollfuss not at all. Not even the Heimwehr, the Home Guard under Prince Starhemberg, which has been the chief support of the chancellor, is satisfied now. One element wants a national Fascist state; another wants to support Dollfuss and still a third would end the bloodshed and trouble by compromising with the Nazis.

But there is no possibility of compromise. What is transpiring is, in effect, a fight between outside forces interested in Austria as an international problem, and internal forces interested in both domestic and international questions. Austria is in reality a battleground between Herr Hitler and the opposing chancellors of Europe. The lovable Austrian people are merely puppets in the tragic drama.

Tilden Comes Back.

William Tilden may be the "old man" of tennis, but he is a long way from being ready "to vanish in the chinks that time has made." His dramatic New York victory over the much-advertised Ellsworth Vines has brought the veteran a renaissance of high distinction in the sports world. Incidentally, he has pushed a few notches higher the age limit at which champions in sports are supposed to be "through."

It was clearly a battle between youth and age. At 41, Tilden's feet are weighted with twice the years of his opponent. When Vines served and returned like a fierce young charger, Tilden met his onslaught like a veteran war horse. The young man was dashing, brilliant, clever. But he fell in three straight sets to the skill of a more mature champion. Even in sport, essentially the field of youth, the seasoning of experience has attributes which can not be ignored.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

The Going-to-Press Broadcast

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What a whale of a good job you did Tuesday night with that going-to-press broadcast! It was a worthy supplement to Harris Hull's nightly chronicle and a graphic epitomization of modern efficiency in news gathering and distribution.

RAY H. EVERETT.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That broadcast of going-to-press was like old times to a man who has handled miles and miles of copy from the lobster trick on in. The program came through fine and you provided everything but the smell of the ink. But I could shut my eyes and get that because what newspaperman ever gets rid of that? All success to you.

RUSSELL T. EDWARDS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having read The Post during recent weeks with enjoyment, I was tremendously pleased to hear in the radio broadcast Tuesday night the actual voices of your capable writers. Your radio program was excellent, and it was quite a treat for us to have your staff of inspiring writers drop in thus unexpectedly and without preparation or any effort on our part.

In this, my first and only letter addressed to you, I also want to tell you that your news and feature articles during recent weeks have been exceptionally readable, entertaining and dependable.

As a disinterested reader, I want to be among those who congratulate you for having created what I sincerely believe to be the best newspaper in Washington.

(Mrs. Q. L.) ANNA R. SCHWARZ.

The Supreme Court Decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is probably in every one an inate vanity that is flattered by being able to say, "I told you so." In a letter of mine regarding the freedom of the press, printed in The Post some time ago, I said, among other things, that it was the present tendency of judicial decisions to accord with the will of society as it manifests itself from time to time, and I predicted that the present Supreme Court, which is notable for its progressiveness and disposition to decide cases touching the public welfare more in the interest of the social welfare than upon technical grounds of individual right, would uphold the emergency legislation of the last Congress.

Recently the court handed down its decision upholding the Minnesota moratorium law. This decision is, indeed, epochal, and should prepare us for radical changes in the political structure of our institutions, and the ineffectiveness of written constitutions to safeguard our individual rights. It marks a break with the past, and a departure upon a novel high road of judicial decisions, the results of which no one can foresee.

While I am more in accord with the opinion of the four dissenting justices, there is at least a pardonable vanity on my part in having anticipated and foreshadowed the court's decision.

The Century of Progress Exposition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the close of 1933 we want to express the high appreciation we feel for the generous aid you have afforded the exposition. We are fully cognizant of the inestimable value of this support in making the exposition a leading factor in national recovery.

Plans for the 1934 fair are progressing with significant rapidity. We shall have much that is new diverting and stimulating. We could ask no better augury for its success than your continued interest, sympathy and support.

A CENTURY OF PROGRESS.

How to Discourage Thrift.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I just read in The Washington Post the editorial on old age pensions. There are many old people who will be glad to know that your paper is behind this movement. Your editorial states that legislation of this kind must be guarded against abuse and that it would be a dangerous practice to discourage thrift and self-reliance through the granting of systematized gratuities from the Public Treasury.

You are right. It is a dangerous practice to discourage thrift. Those who are now doing more to discourage thrift than anyone else are our radical inflationists. It is estimated there are about 40,000,000 American men and women (many of whom are no longer young) who, through many years of thrift and self-denial, have a comparatively small life insurance annuity or a few thousand dollars in a bank. These millions of Americans did not steal this money. In many cases they put on overalls and earned it by the sweat of their bodies, or spent long, tiresome hours at a desk to get it, doing monotonous, grinding work.

So what? So now some of our statesmen want to have our Government confiscate (through radical inflation) 50 per cent or more of the lifetime savings of a large part of our people. If this is done the working class of people will just say, to put it short: "To hell with saving any more for our old age." That was the German peoples' reaction to inflation. It would be ours.

Our Government can raise money through the income tax, after the loopholes are closed whereby the wealthy evade the income tax; through the sales tax which taxes the average person only a little, but the aggregate sum would be large; through a liquor tax; and there are many other ways to raise funds. We know our Government must raise a lot of money, but why take away an average workingman's lifetime savings to do so? This is what the radical inflationist wants to do.

A. C. JAMESTOWN.

Forms of "Progress."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For many years the masses have been clamoring for "social advancement," "local progress," first in this form, next in another form, now "made work," "adopt a family," "emergency relief," "home relief" and last but not least "civil works projects." This last-mentioned form of "progress" is the most honorable means of aiding the unemployed, since every man and woman with an ounce of self-respect still remaining will rather earn his or her daily bread than stand in line for charity or a food ticket.

If pauperism is permitted to be continued, I dare prophesy that in the next decade we will have created a nation of habitual panhandlers, similar to our habitual drug addicts and drunkards, and still worse, these "made paupers" will pass the habit on to generations to come.

MORRIS I. POLANSKY.

Government Pay Cuts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's recommendation that only 5 per cent of Government salaries be restored and that not until July 1, seems to assume that the workers should only be paid enough for a bare living. The 15 per cent which we lost was what made life a little more pleasant; some relief from the eternal problem of ways and means.

I firmly believe that if the pay of the workers had not been cut at all, the country would have been farther along today in the fight against depression. It is rather ridiculous to order us to "buy now," after taking from us the means to do it.

A FEDERAL WORKER.

Commendation for The Post.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to commend you for placing an index on the front page of The Post. Never, lately, could we find things in the same place, such as financial, radio, &c., and we were about to give up the paper because of the exasperation it caused. Keep it up! We also appreciate the vast improvement in the paper.

M. S. FLEISHER.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to commend you for the editorials in The Post of January 3 and 4, entitled "Literary Envoys," "Pension Curtailments," "Penalizing the Little Man" and the letter of Robert Quillen.

If You Wish to Save the World, the Best Place to Begin Is at Home

By Robert Quillen.

Vengeance usually costs more than it is worth.

When the statesmen of one land adopt trade restrictions to injure and repay another for a similar act of unfriendliness, they are stooping to the ancient and imbecilic practice of cutting off the nose to spite the face.

Repeal brings an opportunity to "get even" with the French.

They have, since the war, carried on a campaign of propaganda to injure America; they have done many things, such as withdrawing their gold and sponsoring a raid on the dollar, that indirectly harmed all Americans.

Even so, retaliation is stupid and leads only to further retaliations. It makes statesmanship a kicking match between childish old men.

But if our people should not injure another land in spite, certainly they are under no obligation to injure themselves to benefit another land that is unfriendly.

People who advocate the admission of French wines repeat the ancient argument that other lands can buy more from us only as we buy more from them.

That is true under normal conditions. But the French employ many and devious devices, including common trickery, to discriminate against and keep out American goods. There is no reason to believe that the purchase of French wines would increase American sales in France by so much as a dime's worth.

France has no reason to hate America, except that it is hard to forgive one we have wronged. And if we wronged him after he saved us from destruction, we must find reason to hate him in order to justify ourselves.

No matter. The point to remember is that neither gratitude nor sound economics can justify the purchase of sound wines.

California and other grape-wine sections can supply America's needs.

And a dollar sent to France is a dollar forever lost, while a dollar spent in California remains in America to buy shoes, shirts and automobiles made by American workmen.

Why feed a neighbor's dog that bites you while your own gnaws a dry bone?

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

THERE are a lot of things that I have never been able to understand about newspaper work and newspapermen and one of them is why it is considered enterprising to get an interview with Henry Ford. It is, though. Invariably, the reporter who does it is written up with his photograph in Editor and Publisher as one who has really accomplished something and therefore stands out above the rank and file.

Admittedly, it is difficult to get to the gentleman. This is something his high-salaried publicity men have seen to. And apparently that is the secret of why it is looked upon in newspaper circles as enterprising. They have made it seem very hard and therefore important. As a result there periodically bobs up on the front pages a Ford splurge taking up about as much space as the President's message to Congress.

• • • •

It has just done so in the sedate New York Times, some four columns of it. One of its reporters got to Mr. Ford for an interview, and do you know what he learned? In this amazing exposure or revelation or whatever you may call it we are told that Mr. Ford is not against Mr. Roosevelt's purposes at all, that, on the contrary, he is for them.

And, furthermore, that he has recently conveyed to Mr. Roosevelt the word that in a year or so, when those who are now supporters will have turned against him, he, Mr. Ford, will come forward in support. According to the Times' story, Mr. Ford did not say this himself, but the reporter was permitted to learn it.

How comforting this must be to Mr. Roosevelt! To know that he has such an ace in the hole as Mr. Ford is, I'll bet, what has made him appear so confident. There can be no doubt about the program now.

• • • •

I remember that a few weeks ago the Administration quit saying its program was experimental and began referring to it as an accomplished fact. I believe the President said something of the sort in his initial message to this session of Congress. It must have been that he had received word from Mr. Ford. Certainly no greater assurance could come to a man in doubt.

Mr. Ford came forward, several times, in support of prohibition. He came forward so boldly once, in fact, as to intimate that if prohibition was repealed he would build no more cars.

• • • •

I really think, though, that his greatest coming forward was when he came forward in support of Mr. Hoover in the last campaign. For one thing he made a radio speech in Mr. Hoover's behalf whereupon a lot of Ford owners put tags on their cars reading: "This Ford is for Roosevelt."

But when Mr. Ford really came forward for Mr. Hoover was on the occasion of Mr. Hoover's going to Chicago. It was something his managers were reluctant for him to do. The Republicans had some candidates in Illinois whom they were not proud of and they knew just exactly what the voters intended to do to them. They hated to mix Mr. Hoover up with them. So Mr. Ford came forward and agreed to go to Chicago with Mr. Hoover to give him class. He got up a regular little party, Mr. Ford did, which was to give the then President a dignity above and apart from the other Republican candidates. Illinois was one of the many States that went overwhelmingly for Mr. Roosevelt.

There was another revelation in the interview, however, that I should like to commend to the American Federation of Labor. It concerning the auto manufacturer's attitude toward the NRA. "Why should we be opposed to it?" he asked. "President Roosevelt is trying to make industry do what we were doing 20 years ago."

The A. F. of L. has been denouncing Mr. Ford just about that long.

The Right Hon. Augustine Birrell.

Mr. Augustine Birrell, who died a few weeks ago at the age of 83, was one of the most brilliant Englishmen of his time. A graduate of Cambridge University, he later became Lord Rector of Glasgow University, member of Parliament, professor of law at the the University of London and chief secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

He made a glorious entrance into literature in the year 1884 by publishing anonymously a book of literary essays called "Obiter Dicta," the title of which he modestly and disarmingly explained on the title page. The scholarship, common sense, humor, wisdom, penetration displayed in this little book attracted the keenest attention both in England and in America. I remember with what excitement I read the book when I was an undergraduate. I still think it contains the best single essay on Carlyle I ever read, the most diverting essay on "The Alleged Obscurity of Mr. Browning's Poetry," where he quotes the very prize-puzzle quoted by Katherine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and there was a contributed essay "by another hand" on "Falstaff" which should be read by those who do and those who do not love Falstaff. He compared Falstaff with the heavy, ponderous German commentators and said that they were the authors of headaches while Falstaff was the author of laughter.

World Leader Of Adventist Youth Arrives

Prof. Albert W. Peterson Prepares for Duties in Takoma Park.

Leadership of the youth movement of the general conference of Seventh Day Adventists will be assumed by Prof. Albert W. Peterson, who has assisted in establishing schools in the United States and South America for the training of missionaries. Prof. Peterson arrived in Takoma Park yesterday, preparatory to taking over his new duties.

He will succeed Prof. H. T. Elliott, who has been elected associate secretary of the General Conference.

Born in Minnesota, Prof. Peterson was educated at Union College in Lincoln, Nebr. For four years he was leader of the educational and young people's departments of the Southwestern Union Conference, working in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and New Mexico. For the next six years he held similar positions in Washington, Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Alaska.

Sent to South America in behalf of the youth movement, Prof. Peterson established headquarters in Buenos Aires and visited every nation of that continent except Paraguay.

As world leader of the movement, Prof. Peterson eventually will visit all parts of the earth.

The denomination has 75,000 young people enrolled in the youth movement.

Drunken Driving Charged in Bay Ridge Fatality.

Annapolis, Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Duncan Power, Washington, was held responsible for the death of Louis M. Lehardy 3d, 3-year-old son of Lieut. and Mrs. Louis M. Lehardy, U. S. Navy, killed January 3 in an auto collision.

Radio Waves and Ripples

ONE of the most fantastic stories ever put to opera is the dramatic material of "L'Africana," broadcast for the first time tomorrow afternoon with Rosa Ponselle and Giovanni Martinelli in leading roles.

The tale has to do with the lovely Inez and her sailor lover, Vasco da Gama, and a multitude of absorbing adventures on high seas and among Madagascans.

In the tragic role of Selika, Madagascan queen, whose sacrifice ultimately unites the lovers, Miss Ponselle has been cast. Martinelli is Vasco, a part often sung by the immortal Caruso.

The opera is a Meyerbeer production. It will be broadcast complete in Italian, starting at 1:55 p. m. Both N. B. C. outlets here, WRC and WMAL, will carry it.

N. B. C. and R. C. A. sent Acting Navy Secretary Roosevelt's congratulations to the Hawaiian fliers yesterday.

Col. Roosevelt, in N. B. C.'s Washington studios, heard the description of the arrival of Lieut. Comdr. McGinnis' squadron in Honolulu. Shortly afterward, the circuits were switched to Washington and land wires and short wave carried over the Pacific the colonel's voice:

"A great flight!"

Another point has been raised against radios in automobiles.

It seems to WRC Announcer Don Lowe in reporting a new car display the other night that he had two voices. One he was sending into the microphone and another he heard repeating after him.

He tried several devices for locating this second voice. He spoke almost in a whisper. He spoke slowly. He fairly rattled his lines. Still the same voice in perfect mimicry trailed his words like an echo.

Lowe was beginning to suspect some low but talented person of trickery, until he discovered that a radio in one of the autos had been turned on by some one who wanted to hear his broadcast.

"Fireside Fantasy" is the name N. B. C. has picked for a new local commercial program featuring Paul Dawson and John Slaughter's orchestra and beginning Tuesday night on WRC at 6:45 o'clock. Lucille Pierce Ferguson has written "You're the One" for the theme song.

The mention of firesides invariably is associated with President Roosevelt's famous chats, and then we can't help recalling that one of WMAL Carlton Smith's prized possessions is an autographed picture of himself and Mr. Roosevelt sitting at Warm Springs . . . chatting.

This really ought to be brought to the attention of the sports department. Max Baer dashed into a WMAL studio recently all out of breath from a quick climb up stairs. He was put on the air immediately and, to account for his heavy breathing, explained he had just finished polishing off a couple of sparring partners.

First American playing of William Walton's dramatic cantata, "Belshazzar's Feast," will be put on the air by the Philadelphia Orchestra during its weekly concert this afternoon. The Philadelphia Orchestra Chorus of 400 mixed voices, the Mendelssohn Glee Club and Barytone Dudley Marwick will aid the orchestral presentation of the Englishman's work.

The Rimsky-Korsakoff symphonic suite, "Scheherezade," is the only other composition to be played. It will open the program at 2:30 p. m. WJSV will radio it locally.

The Walton cantata is a modernized and highly concentrated adaptation of the oratorio form, used as a vehicle for the musical narration of the fall of Babylon in terms of memorably heightened dramatic and contemporaneous tonal speech. The first performance of 'Belshazzar's Feast' was given at the Leeds Festival, England, October 20, 1931."

WOL has begun auditions for casting a modernized version of "Rip Van Winkle," with which it will start a series of musical comedy broadcasts early next month. . . . Raymond Chisholm, Irish tenor, begins a Saturday afternoon program series tomorrow at 4:15 on WOL. . . . Ronald Dawson's "Kathleen" is the Northern Dramatic Company offering on the G. B. S. outlet tonight. . . . Jimmy Durante has been signed to substitute for Eddie Cantor Sunday nights, when Eddie is making movies.

Shrill Dirge

Scots Pipe Mourning Tune Along Broadway.

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Bagpipes skirled a dirge on Broadway today.

It was "Lochaber Na More" and the kilted pipers were sad and their step was slow.

No gay plaid, but a large black cloth hung over the big Scotch drum, for the man who beat the drum when the pipers piped merry tunes at the clan rallies was dead.

It was the funeral of John B. Bone, who served with the Fifth Highland Light Infantry and came to America to beat the drum that every piping band must have.

He was killed by an automobile on Sunday.

The procession marched slowly up Broadway. Big Irish patrolmen heard the skirling of "Scots Wha Hae Wi' Wallace Bled" and halted traffic to let the mourners pass.

Commodore Longfellow Named Scout Mobilization Director

Coming Events.

Tomorrow, 7:30 p. m.—Court of Honor and Review, Thomson School.

Tuesday, 6 p. m.—Scout Broadcast, Station WOL.

Thursday, 5:30 p. m.—Scouters' Supper at Western Presbyterian Church.

January 20, 7:30 p. m.—Court of Honor and Review, Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

January 27, 7:30 p. m.—Courts of Honor and Review, Hyattsville, Md., County Building.

January 31, 7 p. m.—Principles of scoutmastership course will begin at new Scout headquarters, 1018 Vermont avenue.

Commodore W. E. Longfellow has been named arrangements committee chairman for the service mobilization of all Boy Scouts in Washington in connection with the Nation-wide mobilization of Scouts February 10, the chief event of the twenty-fourth anniversary week. The mobilization here will be held at the Washington Auditorium.

It will be not only a mobilization of Scouts but a mustering of clothing as well—clothing gathered by the Scouts to be turned over to relief agencies for distribution to needy Washingtonians.

While 3,000 Scouts are mobilizing in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia, similar mobilizations will be held all over the United States. Practically every one of the 800,000 Scouts in the country will participate.

Each of the several thousand mobilization units will have radio equipment to hear an address by President Roosevelt at noon. The President will greet the Scouts on the twenty-fourth anniversary of the founding of Scouting in America, and also will ask the Scouts to take part in the countrywide good turn, the nature of which will not be known in advance of the President's request.

Troops will mobilize by divisions a short distance from the auditorium and march to the central location. The committee on arrangements is composed of W. E. Longfellow, chairman; Virgil Howard, L. W. Kephart, Wilton Eyer, Ed Perkins, Richard Rule, J. S. Hawley, George G. Whitney, William C. Cooper, E. W. Lawless, W. H. McConnaughy, E. C. Hartung, Frank M. Young, F. S. Taylor, David Lockling, Bruce Melvin and J. P. Hovey.

Troops Hold Contests.

Many troops are holding inter-patrol first aid contests this week, preparing for divisional competitions later in January. The council wide first aid contest will be held early in March.

Flying Eagle Patrol Wins.

With Ovid Foote as patrol leader, the Flying Eagles of Troop 25 easily won the Keystone first aid contest and will represent the troop in the division finals. The Panthers, under Deane Rose, placed second. Commander O. C. Foote, committeeman, judged the contest.

Court at Hyattsville.

At a court of honor and review held at Hyattsville, Md., the following Scouts were advanced in rank: To first class, Troop 201, Henry Albright.

Old Scouts May Take Part.

Old Scouts Associations composed of former Scouts who have grown out of their troops, may participate in anniversary week in February if feasible organizations of these newly projected associations are effected by that time.

Troop 81 Parents' Night.

Troop 81 of the Trinity Methodist Church held its annual parents' night last night with a large attendance of parents and friends. Linn C. Drake, Scout executive of the District of Columbia Council, spoke.

Winter Camp Turns Warm.

The Christmas camp of Troop 8 held at Livingstone last Saturday, Sunday and Monday, started off pretty cold, but gradually warmed up as the new year approached. Seven Scouts who took part made good progress with construction of the new cabin.

Mason Gray to West Point.

Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Mason Gray has received one of the permanent Presidential appointments to the United States Military Academy given to sons of Army officers.

Court at Clarendon, Va.

At a court of honor and review held at Clarendon, Va., the following Scouts were advanced in rank:

To second class, Troop 103, Philip O. Shepherd; Troop 104, Robert Bean.

Qualified for merit badges: Troop 149, C. L. Murdock, first aid; W. A. Breeze, first aid and hiking; T. S. Nickerson, first aid; F. G. Nickerson, first aid; J. O. Spitler, jr., safety.

Scouters' Banquet Thursday.

Certificates for completion of training courses will be presented to 50 scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters and troop committeemen at the scouters' supper to be held at the Western Presbyterian Church at 5:30 p. m. Thursday.

Mr. Gunnar H. Berg, author, lecturer and educator of New York City, will speak.

Troop 56 Committee Named.

Troop 56, of the Peck Memorial Chapel, has named a membership committee composed of Ernest Dinsemore, chairman; Richard Logan and Harold Beatty. The troop will hold a parents' night March 23.

Two Join Troop 33.

Troop 33 accepted two candidates, Evan Fisher and James Van Devanter, who have completed their tests, as members of the troop. Evan was assigned to the Wildcat Patrol and Jimmy to the Hawk Patrol. Mr. Kephart organized two cooking classes to be held at the church on Monday and Tuesday evenings at 5 o'clock.

Ludlow Allen was advanced to second-class Scout and the following merit badges were awarded: Alfred Hazard, firemanship, personal health, public health; Bill Thompson, camping; Paul McClennon, first aid; Warren Steiner, pioneering, life saving; Wilmer Steiner, pioneering. A total of 254 merit badges were awarded in 1933, a large proportion of these being badges required for Eagle rank.

Arrangements have been made for a talk by N. H. Darton, of the Geological Survey, January 19, on the geology of the District of Columbia and vicinity.

School Lunch Job Quota Exhausted

Enough Workers Register to Fill Needs.

All the applicants needed for jobs in the school free lunch program and for the nursery classes have been registered, Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of the two programs, announced yesterday.

Mr. Haycock said other applicants should apply at relief headquarters and not at the Franklin School. Seventy-five helpers out of the quota of 94 have been assigned to the schools serving lunches. Teachers, nurses, nutritionists and other employes in the nursery schools are yet to be assigned, but an adequate number has applied.

"Cradle Song" Opens at the Metropolitan—New Week's Screen and Stage Bills

Repeats Fine Work Scored in "Maedchen" With Superb Support.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"CRADLE SONG." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Marc Connelly, adapted from the stage play by G. M. Martinez Sierra, starring Dorothea Wieck, with Sir Guy Standing, Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Georgia Caine, Gertrude Michael, Dickie Moore and Eleanor Wesselhoeft. Directed by Mitchell Leisen, with music by W. Franke Harling. Reviewed Wednesday morning.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is a tender, devout and beautiful version of the G. M. Martinez Sierra play that Marc Connelly, author of "The Green Pastures," has devised for the stellar uses of Dorothea Wieck—a film play that treats sacred subjects reverentially, as is their due, and traces with delicacy and feeling the struggle that goes on in the breast of a young woman whose life is dedicated to the cloistered sacrifices of self-abnegation, but in whose heart all worldly impulses have not died.

"Cradle Song" tells the simple story of the spirit of motherhood flowering within the walls of a convent in Spain. A foundling is left at the convent gate and the Prioress is prevailed upon to allow the tiny girl-baby to remain to be reared by the gardner's wife and Sister Joanna, who only lately has taken the vows.

That the requirements of the law may be fully met, Baby Teressa is formally adopted by the kind-hearted and understanding village doctor, who, heretic that he is, ministers to the spirits as well as the bodies of his charges.

Youth and Love.

Teresa grows to young womanhood, with the longing constantly in Sister Joanna's heart that she, too, will elect to become a nun and remain always in the little community in which she has been reared, sheltered from the outside world which all the sisters have renounced.

But one day Doctor Jose takes his foster daughter to the village and there she meets the young engineer, who is directing the work on a new station for the railroad, lately run through the town as part of the progressive development of the Republic. A great and natural love springs up between Teresa and Antonio and they are betrothed. The day comes when they are to be married. The ceremony is planned first for the convent, where Sister Joanna will act the adoring role of Teresa's mother. Then comes a message that the marriage must be performed in Madrid, where Antonio's mother, unable to travel, may see her son wed.

It is the great, final, crushing sacrifice of Sister Joanna's strangely contradictory life—the one supreme act by which her whole being is sanctified to the glory of her faith.

Drama of Little Action.

The developments of the drama, gentle and unadorned by any of the airy graces of imaginative writing, take place almost wholly within the walls of the convent. There is throughout the action an insistent suggestion that a concentrated effort has been made to supply Fraulein Wieck, in her first American picture, as many as possible of the elements of greatness and quiet power that characterized "Maedchen in Uniform," the German-made film in which she was first seen in this country.

Fraulein Wieck plays the part of the young nun so richly gifted with the mother instinct, in only slightly accented English, with a sympathetic wistfulness that rather surpasses anything she was permitted to reveal in "Maedchen." There are no scenes of tempestuous emotionalism here, but, instead, a sustained study in gentleness, repression and a sweet and beatific spirit at torturing war with itself. The artistry of the Wieck performance is to be measured as much by the things she does not do as by those she does. She proves herself an artiste of intelligence, forcefulness and ineffable charm.

Support Admirably Chosen.

The casting of all the play's important roles has been accomplished with conspicuous skill. Sir Guy Standing is an admirable choice for the kindly and great-hearted village physician whose counsel smoothes the way over so many seemingly insuperable difficulties. Louise Dresser, long absent from the screen, as the Prioress, and Georgia Caine, as the acidulous vicaress, contribute no less effective support in roles quite as vital to the movement of the placid and, at times, infinitely pathetic story of woman's vast capacity for love.

The youthful note of romance is charmingly struck by Evelyn Venable, an ingenuous young woman of appealing beauty and great promise, whose opportunities are somewhat less restricted than Kent Taylor's in the role of Antonio, whom she finally is to marry. There are, of course, many others—including Master Dickie Moore in a brief introductory bit—who aid in creating an illusion of reality that considerably surpasses the essay at the same end undertaken in Helen Hayes' recent production of "The White Sister."

Play for Thoughtful.

However, it is as much to the flawless direction of Mitchell Leisen, the art direction of W. B. Ihnen and the photography of Charles Lang as to any other combination of factors that "Cradle Song" is indebted for the dignified and superb quality of its impressiveness.

A new issue of the Paramount Sound News, a clever short-reel subject in which Sigmund Spaeth, the "Tune Detective," has a cleverly contrived joust with Franz Schubert, and a delightful study in the incorrigibility of babyhood, called "Little Miss Mischief," are excellent auxiliaries of a feature that will exercise a strong appeal to thoughtful drama lovers, but a doubtful one to the frivolous amusement seeker.

Cantor Brings Ancient Rome To the Palace

Ruth Etting, David Manners, Gloria Stuart and a horde of gorgeous sirens appear with this pop-eyed comedian in this Samuel Goldwynn production that presents him as the nuttiest Roman of them all.

Its story is that of a wide-eyed, brow-beaten lad in West Rome, Oklahoma, who, through the force of his own imagination is carried back to strange adventures in the Rome of the Caesars.

Attired in the raiment of the colorful citizens of that era, Eddie becomes involved in a succession of the funniest incidents ever screened, his mad-cap adventures culminating in a thundering chariot race to the sea that is a comic classic.

George S. Kaufman and Robert Sherwood, two of the Nation's outstanding comedy writers, fashioned this story especially for Cantor. Frank Tuttle directed, and several lilting musical hits were especially written by Al Dubin, Harry Warren and L. Wolfe Gilbert.

A Gay Romance Announced for Rialto Today

Opening today, and a worthy successor to the John Barrymore production, "By Candlelight," with Elissa Landi, Paul Lukas, Esther Ralston, Nils Asther and Dorothy Revier, brings to the Rialto Theater screen the smartest, the gayest, the most delightful comedy of the season.

James Whale, who directed this adaptation of the Gilbert Miller Broadway success, has seen to it that "By Candlelight" possesses the exact note of comedy, romance and action required. Critics are saying that his achievement shades the New York stage production by many degrees.

"By Candlelight" has for its settings the old romantic city of Vienna, plus the wild and tempestuous environs of Monte Carlo. And the story is a grand mix-up done in high comedy vein, by a cast that brings brilliance and hilarity to the task.

The Rialto Theater completes this extraordinary program with Graham McNamee in his favorite role of Talking Reporter in the latest Universal News, together with a shorter added attraction and screen novelties especially selected.

Comedy Reigns Undisputed on Keith's Screen

Two new and riotously funny comedy teams are presented for movie-goers' amusement in "The Meanest Gal in Town," to have its first showing anywhere at RKO-Keith's tomorrow.

They are ZaSu Pitts and El Brendel, and Pert Kelton and James Gleason.

This exceptional comedy cast—probably one of the greatest array of stellar funsters ever grouped in one picture—is further augmented by Skeets Gallagher in the role of a serio-comic villain.

The story, designed purely for laughing purposes, concerns the romantic and economic adventures and misadventures of five people in a one-horse town.

The new Keith bill will be further enhanced by the first of the Amos 'n' Andy cartoons, "The Rasslin' Match" and the second in the Ruth Etting musical productions, "California Weather."

With these names added in the subsidiary featurettes Keith's new bill gives every indication of being a truly allstar program.

Crothers Play And Radio Ace At Loew's Fox

Warner Baxter in an absorbing picturization of the Rachel Crothers stage success, "As Husbands Go," and a stage program that throws the spotlight jointly on Poet Prince, romantic tenor of the air waves, and the Merry Maestro, Carl Freed, and his internationally famous orchestra, is the latest anniversary entertainment announced to be unfolded at Loew's Fox Theater tomorrow.

"As Husbands Go" offers a story that is unusually true and human and one which sparkles with humor and smart dialogue. Warner Baxter is said to surpass anything he has done in recent films in this new characterization. He is supported by the blonde Helen Vinson, Warner Oland, G. P. Huntley, jr., and Catherine Doucet, in her original stage role.

The picture is described as a romance for women that all men will like. It deals with the wife who is undecided whether or not she should give up a devoted husband for what at the moment appears to be a glamorous new romance.

Poet Prince is the latest romantic vocalist to earn wide popularity over the radio. Carl Freed and his orchestra have recently returned from Europe, where they appeared at some of the foremost theaters. A feature of the Freed act is Daisy, the World's Fair wonder horse.

Al Nord and Jeanne, in a comedy skit, and Virginia Lee and Tommy Rafferty in "Dance Diversions," with Adeline Bendon and Tommy and Billy Joyce, complete the vaudeville.

Train Mystery Offers Unique Entertainment

"The Silk Express" brings a gripping mystery drama that moves with express speed to the screen of Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow.

Neil Hamilton, Shelia Terry, Allen Jenkins, Dudley Digges, Harold Huber, Ivan Simpson and others comprise the cast of this unusual sort of mystery.

The situation in this film is unique, virtually all of the action taking place aboard an express train loaded with $3,000,000 worth of raw silk as it speeds from Seattle to New York. The plot revolves around the attempt of a group of silk speculators to wreck the train in order to prevent the arrival of the silk until after they've cornered the New York market.

Two mysterious murders are committed aboard this heavily guarded express, with a third attempted. Eight persons are under suspicion, with the finger of guilt pointing successively at each. It is not until the speeding train arrives in New York that this baffling mystery reaches an unusually clever denouement.

Latest news events, a comedy and short subjects also are on the program.

Bert, Bob and Dorothy Stars Of Earle Bill

One of the most important bookings of the new year will bring to Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, the noted screen comics of "Rio Rita," "Girl Crazy" and "Diplomaniacs" in person, with their screen playmate, Dorothy Lee. On the screen will be Paul Muni in his first screen comedy, "Hi, Nellie!"

Paul Muni leaves the straight dramatic roles he has been portraying for the part of a newspaperman in his first screen comedy, "Hi, Nellie!" As the managing editor of a newspaper, he bungles a big story and is relegated to the "Heart Throbs"

Muni is well supported by Glenda Farrell as the girl reporter, whose taunts are his incentive for better work; Ned Sparks as the pal who believes in him, despite his demotion; Robert Barrat, Douglas Dumbrille, Hobart Cavanaugh and Berton Churchill.

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, who headline the stage bill, need no introduction to Washington audiences. These two laugh maniacs will be remembered for their crazy antics in scores of film hits. Assisted by Dorothy Lee, they will offer 30 minutes of the fastest fun ever seen on a Washington stage.

Other acts will be Enrica and Novello, international dance favorites; George Kirby and Helen Duval in a comedy skit, "Laughectionately Yours," and the Pasquali Brothers.

President Is Host To Foreign Envoys

Diplomatic Dinner Marks Zenith of Season for Official Society; Famous Monroe Gold Centerpiece Decorates Table for State Entertainment.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The most brilliant State dinner of the official season was given last evening at the White House by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, in honor of the chiefs of missions and their wives. The diplomatic dinner, like the diplomatic reception, outshines all other State entertainments in color and varied interest.

The formal dress of the distinguished men present, with full decorations, and the handsome gowns of the women, frequently designed especially for the occasion by the famous couturiers of Europe, enhanced by magnificent jewels, lend a note of glamour missing in other functions.

The famous Monroe gold centerpiece decorated the table. This "surtout de table" was purchased by President Monroe from France, and consists of an enormous mirror framed in gilt on bronze, upheld by classic figures balancing the centerpiece in one hand, and smaller candelabra and epergnes in the other. Along the length of the table were matching baskets containing fruits and candies, and alternating were candelabra and vases filled with pink roses, snapdragons, stevia, baby primula, and gloriosum ferns.

Mr. Jascha Heifetz Gives Concert.

Following the dinner, other members of the Diplomatic Corps and additional guests were invited for the concert given by the famous violinist, Mr. Jascha Heifetz, accompanied by Mr. Arpad Sandor, at the piano.

The program included three groups. In the first, a sonatina by Shubert, and sarabade, gavotte and musette by Bach, arranged by Mr. Heifetz; in the second group, "Largo" on the G string, by Clerambauld; "Chorus of Dervishes," by Beethoven; "Impromptu," by Shubert; "Caprice No. 20," by Paganini; in the third group, Brahms' "Hungarian Dance, No. 20;" "El Puerto," by Alenix; "L'Apres Midi D'un Faune," by Debussy, arranged by Mr. Heifetz, and the well-known "Bumble Bee," by Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Mme. Guiomar Novaes, famous Brazilian pianist, who was to have appeared on the program with Mr. Heifetz, was unable to fill the engagement because of illness. Mme. Novaes was heard in Washington last season at one of Mrs. Townsend's morning musicales.

Distinguished Guests At Dinner.

The guests at the dinner included the dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar; the Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay, the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Belgium, Mr. Paul May; the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. de Lima e Silva, the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil, the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas, the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislas Patek; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso; the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, the Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther; the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, and the Ambassador of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky.

Mrs. C. S. Briggs Becomes Bride Of Mr. Wendell

The wedding of Mrs. Clay Stone Briggs, widow of Representative Briggs of Texas, and Mr. Ten Eyck Wendell, son of Mrs. Ten Eyck Wendell, of New York and Lakelawn, Cazenovia, N. Y., and the late Mr. Wendell, took place yesterday in St. James' Episcopal Church, in New York, with the Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan officiating. Only members of the immediate families were present.

Mrs. Briggs is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Louis Ernst Slayton and a granddaughter of the late Dr. William Coles Slayton, of Rochester, N. Y. Through her mother, the former Miss Emily Hawkins, she is a granddaughter of Sir John Hawkins, of England. Mrs. Briggs is well known in Washington and at Cazenovia, where she has a summer home. She is a graduate of the University of Rochester.

Mr. Wendell is a member of a family who for generations have figured in the history of New York and Massachusetts. Through his father, who died in 1932, he is related to the Van Rensselaer, Schuyler, Bleecker, Lansing, Burr and Ten Eyck families of New York. Through his mother, the former Miss Mary Dwight Foote, he is descended from Jonathan Dwight and is a great-great-grandson of Cyrus Alger, of Boston, and also a great-great-grandson of Royall Tyler, early American playwright and the first lieutenant governor of Massachusetts. Two of his maternal ancestors were presidents of Yale University. Mrs. Wendell and the late Mr. Wendell with their son spent a number of years in Washington and have many friends here.

Mr. Wendell, who is a lawyer and insurance broker, was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1919. He is a member of the Union and Tuxedo Clubs, the St. Nicholas Society and the Holland Society.

Alumni Here Observe Cornell Founder's Day

The Cornell Alumni Association of Washington entertained at a dinner last evening in the Garden House of the Dodge Hotel in celebration of founder's day.

Dr. William I. Myers, Cornell, '16, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, spoke. By a telephone hookup the group listened to addresses by President Farrand, Dean Kimball and Professor Durham, of the Cornell faculty at a banquet in Ithaca, N. Y.

The president of the women's group of the Cornell Alumni Association in the Capital is Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist and of the men's group, Mr. John Gorrell.

Royal Couple Due In Capital Today

Visitors From Hesse to Be Dinner Guests.

Their Highnesses, Prince and Princess Christian of Hesse, will arrive in Washington from New York today, and will stop at the National Woman's Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman will entertain at dinner this evening in their honor at the National Women's Country Club.

Princess Christian formerly was Miss Elizabeth Rogers, of Washington. They made a tour of this country in 1924 and in January of that year they spent several days in Washington as the guests of Mr. Edward Alsop.

All Iowans in Washington are invited.

Science Learns to Educate Children Helpless at Birth

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—Scientific muscular and mental exercises can make useful citizens out of babies rendered seemingly helpless by birth injuries, Dr. Earl Carlson, of New York, tonight told the convention of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons.

Dr. Carlson, director of reeducation for birth injured at the Institute of Neurology, pointed to himself as an example, saying he had been injured at birth and at 18 scarcely was able to dress and feed himself.

He said that since intelligence can gain expression only through some muscular response, a birth injury may remove the ability to make this response, until muscular education is directed to teaching the healthy neurons to perform functions compensatory to those that are lost or absent.

There are 100,000 children in the United States today destined to become charitable charges because of physical handicaps which can be corrected if treated properly, he said.

Many persons of normal mental potentialities, he said, have been classed as feeble-minded and therefore neglected.

Dr. Louis O. Hermann, of Cincinatti, described a new treatment called "negative pressure" for hardening of the arteries. The afflicted member, he said, is placed in what resembled a vacuum chamber to remove pressure and induce a new and greater circulation.

North Carolina Society Plans Congress Fete

Reception and Dance Set at Shoreham Hotel January 20.

The North Carolina Society of Washington will observe "Congressional Night" with a reception and dance in honor of the North Carolina delegation in Congress on the night of January 20, from 9 to 12 o'clock in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Those who will receive will include Senator and Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, Senator and Mrs. Robert R. Reynolds and the members of the House of Representatives from North Carolina. The receiving line will form at 9 o'clock. The George Washington University Glee Club will sing, and there will be music for dancing and tables for card playing.

The floor committee is composed of Capt. and Mrs. Adolphus Staton, Mr. and Mrs. Ivring B. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Herschel V. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. McNeill, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John W. Gulick, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Norman, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Turlington, Mr. and Mrs. Wade B. Hampton and Dr. Ovid C. Foote.

Former Governor of North Carolina and Mrs. O. Max Gardner and former Governor of North Carolina and Mrs. Angus W. McLean have been invited to be in the receiving line.

Brig. Gen. A. E. Williams is president of the society, Miss Jane Elizabeth Newton, secretary-treasurer. Membership cards and guest cards may be obtained from the secretary-treasurer, Chastleton Hotel, or at the door the night of the party.

Rotund Cherry Unmasks Itself As a Saltcellar

It's One of Many Clever Household Gadgets on Display in Shops.

A hearty masculine shake and the fat cherry sprinkles salt into the air.

Salt and pepper shakers! The cherries are larger than a walnut, they come in black, red or white, the stems and leaves are silvered. When not in use they lie gracefully on the side—cute, what? They are $1.25 a pair.

Can you reach between your shoulder blades? Not that we are curious, but if you can't scratch your own back there's something that can scratch it for you. Chinese bamboo back scratchers, "for solid comfort," are 25 cents each. Get one and you won't wear out the edge of the door nor throw your shoulder out of joint. The little sticks with carved hands on the end are cunning as a knick-knack, even if your back doesn't need attention.

A Frog Cigarette Snuffer.

The man who made the Fisher body adverstisements famous has put out a limited number of little green bronze ash trays. One of them has some little toadstools on the edge of the bowl, and a little frog sits under the toadstools. When a cigarette is to be put out, the frog can be hopped over the edge to stamp out the burning ash. This tray is $3. Another with a Scottie on the edge and a turtle stamper is $3.50.

Looks kind of shiny for a cigarette—but it's the right size and shape, and is tipped in gold. You pick it up, pull off the gold tip, and with a flip of the thumb, there's a flame! A lighter that will fit into your cigarette case, looking for all the world like one of your smokes. The lighter—25 cents.

Sales—sales—sales! All over the town! There's an antelope pocketbook, softly gathered into the top, and fastened with a lovely crystal clasp. It used to be $5 and now is only $2.95. The antelope is beautiful quality, smooth as velvet, and will stand a lot of hard wear. There are suede pocketbooks on sale for $1.45 in the same shop.

Compacts of Suede.

Speaking of suede—it's been wrapping itself around compacts! There are lovely ones, in black or brown, edged with gold and decorated with dainty little filigree pattern in the middle of the lid. They would slip stunningly into the suede pocketbook, and their proud possessor could flick a speck of powder on her tip-tilted nose with definite hateur. The compacts are $1.50.

A bit of chintz, some scraps of wood, some careful daubings of paint, and a bedroom set for a doll's house is created.

A clever cabinet maker and a woman who upholsters have made a set that would delight the heart of the most sophisticated little girl. There is a little bed with a canopy ruffled with red and blue patterned chintz, a vanity dresser with a three-sided mirror, and a bench to match, an adorable chaise-lounge and a side table, all for $2. The set is made by hand, the finish is exquisite.

First thought—what a lovely lamp; glowing orange light. Second thought—odd standard—why it's made of corn husks and the shade is peppered with ground corn kernels! Third thought—just the thing for the attic recreation room, or the bedroom done in early American. The standard is really clever. The corn husks have been carefully scraped, and fastened together in a wooden frame, then shellacked. The shade is squarely shaped. The price is $7.50.

Liqueur Glasses.

Pretty soon all America's best families will be serving liqueur with the after-dinner coffee. And Washington's best families will need a little set of tiny appropriate glasses. Six of them, delicately tinted with rainbow colors come with a chromium-plated tray. The tray has a handle in the middle of it and around the handle a metal frame to hold the glasses. All you need to do is fill the containers, pick up the handle with a couple of fingers and pass 'em around. The whole set is priced at $3.25.

Let's go barbaric Particularly where jewelry is concerned, let's go as barbaric as possible. A bracelet, wide and shining gold set in the middle with a huge glass ornament, modernistically cut, reminds one of the arm bands of the Carthaginians. There is a heavy gold chain with a pendant set with the glittering bauble to match the bracelet, and large and small clips to go with the set. Each piece is marked down from $1 to 69 cents, so go early and avoid the barbaric rush. They are strikingly original, and for inexpensive costume jewelry, astonishingly good looking.

Princes and Sport King Pins Wear Same Woolly Sweaters

Directed by Amos Parrish

Sweaters of the types described are available in Washington in all better-class shops.

New York, Jan. 11.—The Duke of York, the Prince of Monaco and the King of Belgium probably have no idea how much they share in common with Pat Mulligan the Pug (prize fighter to you). They all like nothing better than to slip into the warm, clinging comfort of a sweater.

Beyond being the practical garment it is, the sweater could get by today on its looks alone. Few things men wear are as easy to look at and as practical to wear as the V-neck slipover . . . the most popular of all men's sweaters . . . and the one most men look best in.

Crew Neck For Cold Weather.

On the other hand, college men particularly like the crew neck sweater . . . the rounder neck taken from the prescribed uniform of the crew and football squads. With all the advantages of the V-neck plus the fact that it exposes less chest and is for that reason a better cold-weather model.

There are also legions of men in this land who still insist on coat sweaters (the British call them cardigans) because they can slip into them and button them up without rumpling a single hair. And the coat sweater is actually staging a come-back, not only for winter, but for spring and summer, too.

Most of the men you know take their sweaters plain. Fancy pattern and fancy weave wearers are a minority, though their numbers (and prestige) are definitely on the up. But the plain sweater—most frequently brushed to give it a shaggier, woolier effect—is way, way out in front.

Medium Lightweights Preferred.

Because men usually wear their sweaters under suit clothes or overcoats or topcoats, it's the medium and lightweights they like best.

Men who like blues and grays in their suits, naturally enough stay that way in their sweaters, which means most of them. But for the brown wearing man, cocoa, medium and light brown are much in fashion. You can add maroon to that list, for either type man, and complete the picture. Except for the horseback riding man, who frequently wears his canary yellow.

One good sweater rule is pockets . . . because men are that way. And another is shorter sweaters . . . hip length at the longest, and very smart just below the waist line. In other words, no weight or bulk you don't need. In fact, many a new sweater has a free, loose-hanging bottom, as a change from the knitted-rib, hip-hugging rule of the past.

Note (to wise next-summer-thinking men)—Sleeveless pullovers will be it.

"Dining Out" Adds Another Victim

A Fair Guest Confuses Time and Place.

The great and glorious game of "dining out" leads, at times, to strange incidents in Washington.

There is a good story traveling around Washington's whispering gallery just now. It concerns a man who found written on his card as he entered the cloakroom of a high-placed home, the name of the wife of a new Congressman from the Middle West.

When he arrived in the drawing room and picked out his lady he found her a much flustered person. Noting her nervousness he bowed graciously over her hand and declared: "I believe I am to have the pleasure of taking you out to dinner."

"Goodness me," she answered hastily, "are we going 'out' to dinner? I thought we were going to eat here."

Quince Seed Wave-Set.

A few quince seeds boiled in water and the liquid strained through a piece of cheese cloth makes a wonderful finger-wave lotion, suggests Frances Dee. It may be perfumed with your favorite fragrance.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

If January 12 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:10 to 8:30 a. m., from 9:30 to 11 a. m., and from 6 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 11:30 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 9 to 10 p. m.

If you were born on this date you are of a very religious disposition. Creeds and ritualisms do not have a strong appeal to you. You worship according to your own light, guided, however, largely by the theological works written by more or less modern inspired writers. You are not of the type to become a preacher, but you do try and pass your own religious thoughts and beliefs on to those you think may help. On this date you will have the opportunity to put into practice the saying: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," for the temptation to take an unfair advantage of a friend will come your way. You value this friendship too much to intentionally do anything that is not absolutely fair, so all that you have to do is to be careful how you handle any business transaction during the day. You are a discriminating reader, and will do well in the educational field.

The child born on January 12 will grow up a perfectly normal youngster. It will exhibit all the characteristics of the typical American child, being neither very studious nor actually lazy, but perfectly satisfied to study only enough to get by in its school work. As it grows older and becomes interested in some definite line of thought or business it will show its capability to apply itself, and will with enthusiasm master what it undertakes.

Women born on January 12, unless they marry, usually become interested in missionary or welfare work. As a rule, social life has very little appeal to them. If you were born on this date, you will gain a great deal of gratification by making a personal sacrifice for one who is very dear to you, which will ultimately result in happiness for both of you.

Men born on January 12 are usually very quiet, and try to keep out of the limelight. If you were born on this date, you are a good mathematician, and will succeed if you take up accountancy or engineering. You are inclined to be more of a book worm than the gay white way butterfly. Your temperate habits will greatly help you achieve success. A good woman will make you happy, and with your own high regard for the standards of morality, your married left has its happiness assured. You should exercise a great deal of discretion before investing your money, and avoid the speculative marts. Frugality is your keystone for the structure of a very successful and happy life.

Successful people born on January 12:

By Katherine Smith.

We have often been told by the optimists that
They are sure we should all be as happy as kings.
In addition the reason is obviously
That the world is so full of a number of things.
But I find that the number of gadgets does not Make my difficult life more alluring to me,
For I find that I see everything that I want,
And, what's worse, I can't have everything that I see.

Stuffed Meat Dishes Attain New Popularity

Recipe for Bread Filling May Serve Variety of Purposes.

Stuffings are becoming more and more popular since many of our meat cuts are boned at the market. Such cuts as the shoulder of pork or lamb are ideal for boning and stuffing; then friend husband need have no worry about carving them at the table.

Too, pockets may be cut in chops, and the pocket stuffed with a savory stuffing. Or meat birds may be made by placing a mound of stuffing on a square of thinly cut meat, and rolling and skewering into shape.

The savoriness of the stuffing depends upon the seasoning, so here is a recipe for a standard well-seasoned bread dressing. It is suggested by Inez S. Wilson, home economist.

Standard Bread Stuffing.

2 cups bread crumbs.
1 teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning or sage.
1 teaspoon minced onion.
1 egg, slightly beaten.
¼ cup melted butter.
⅛ teaspoon thyme.
2 tablespoons chopped parsley.

Toss with a fork until thoroughly mixed. For a moist stuffing add ½ cup milk or cream.

Variations may be gained in this standard recipe by adding other ingredients.

Sausage Stuffing.

Break ½ pound pork sausages into small pieces and fry them until they are crisp and brown. Add ¼ cup of mushrooms cut fine, canned or fresh. Cook a little longer and add to standard recipe.

Chestnut Stuffing.

Cook 1 quart chestnuts in boiling water until they are tender. Cool and remove the shell and underskin and chop fine. Melt ¼ cup butter and cook the chestnuts in it until they are delicate brown. Add the ingredients listed in the standard recipe given above with the exception of poultry seasoning, sage and thyme. Also add 1 teaspoon of grated lemon rind. Toss lightly together until thoroughly mixed.

Sport Ensemble Novelties Shown

Paris Designers Cater to Winter Needs.

All the leading dressmakers of Paris are now showing novelties in sports ensembles for wear at the winter sports. At a recent showing held by Madeleine Derauch, a great number of rubberized materials in tricot and jersey were featured. Most of the costumes consisted of Norwegian trousers with short boleros or novel pull-overs, with sometimes a yoke effect and very wide shoulder line. Checked materials and heavy tweeds, also rubberized, are sponsored by this house and used for original costumes composed of rather short trousers of the golf type and little jackets hardly longer than a bolero, but close-fitted around the waist, and with square lapels. Whether they are of the jacket, pull-over or bolero type, all of these jackets are fastened with Pyralin clips.

Combinations of colors are more in evidence than ever. There are still a few navy blue costumes, but Norwegian gray combined with vermilion red, brown combined with pistachio green, beige and brown, and sometimes brown and white, are the favorite schemes. All the trimmings and accessories are in angora wool, usually hand-knitted, and a great number of the little berets, toques and bonnets to match, in the same hand-knitted angoras, have composition clips to gather pleats or a drape effect.

The Family Marketer

She remembered tasting that dark Norwegian goat's milk cheese when she was a little girl, and the memory of its delicious flavor haunted her.

Her inquiries were answered with "No, I never heard of it," or, "We don't carry it any more," but, still persisting, she finally found it.

If you know this cheese as the Marketer does, you'll rush out and get some immediately—if not, she suggests that you try it, because it is truly a delicacy. It comes in a square hunk, brown in color—looks a little like washing soap, if you'll pardon the odious comparison and sells for 55 cents a pound. In the same delicatessen is sold the soft creamy Bifrof, of the Norwegians, for 25 cents a package. The proprietor explains carelessly, "We'll give you any kind of cheese you want—German, or French, Norwegian or Swiss."

Calve's Foot Jelly.

Here's an especially nice dainty for convalescents: calves foot jelly, flavored with port or sherry. It comes in liquid form, and will solidify when put in the ice box. It is 40 cents a jar.

Since we have cheese from Norway, let's take a trip to another quarter of the world and get some pulled figs from Turkey. They are packed in wooden boxes in two sizes, one for 38 cents, the other 75 cents.

A French importation is pate de fois gras, packed in a little earthenware container. The pate is seasoned with truffles, and the price is 90 cents, and $1.50 for the larger size. A high price, but considering what you get, it is worth it.

Stuffed Ripe Olives.

The Marketer heard some one inquire about ripe olives stuffed with anchovies, so she set out to look for them. She found them today, temptingly packed in a bottle, for 90 cents.

Sardines are fine, but they are so difficult to get out of the can. You spear them with a fork, they won't wiggle; you apply a little force, they flutter a lazy fin, and finally with rising wrath you prod them out brutally, and in doing so shatter the poor fish's graceful proportions into ragged fragments. But here's a can of imported sardines that will eliminate all the difficulties. The top of the tin container peels right off, then you invert the can on a dish and the sardines fall out in a neat row. They are packed in an upright position side by side instead of one on top of the other. The fish are skinless and boneless. The can, 30 cents.

There's a store that will sell perfectly delicious English crumpets on Fridays and Saturdays for some time to come, at 60 cents a dozen. For those of you who like the English bakery products, try them once, and you'll be sure to come back for more.

Red Cross Veteran Earned Only $36 in 36 Years

But Mrs. William S. Spencer Never Bothered to Collect Her Salary.

The Grand Old Volunteer of Mercy Was Too Busy Helping Others.

By Elizabeth Young.

That's the record which makes Mrs. William S. Spencer, of 1507 Park road northwest, Washington's oldest Red Cross worker in point of service.

"The 36 mythical dollars have never been collected, but no money ever made could approximate the happiness the work has paid me," the grand old volunteer veteran told a Post representative yesterday.

"How I've enjoyed it! When I was ill last February, I don't think I would have pulled through if it hadn't been for the thought of all the Red Cross work I wanted to do yet. I didn't come back until June, but I came back."

Spanish-American War.

Mrs. Spencer's memory of Red Cross work dates back to Spanish-American War days, when it was no uncommon experience to have a disabled warrior come calling upon a benefactress clad in one of the outing flannel pajamas her generosity had provided him.

"Yes. That was when jajamas for men first made their appearance. It was warm weather here in Washington; the pajamas made a combortable outfit; and it was not thought improper for soldiers to wear them in public.

"I remember a poor soldier boy from Pennsylvania. He came down with spinal meningitis in camp here, and lost the sight of one eye.

"In those days our government didn't have the splendid provision they have today for giving their soldiers recreation and food and clothes. I was in charge of Red Cross recreation work under Clara Barton. I was a pretty good beggar and had great succes in getting people to give us things to make life passable for the soldier boys.

"Up the steps one day, in pajamas and crutches, came this boy, miserable, hungry, seeking comfort. We fed him a special diet and I made him go back to his hospital, promising him I'd see him before the night was ended.

"About midnight I got over to his camp with some milk and talked with his major. I told him he'd have to do something about the boy, that he was in a dying condition and the flies were eating him up. There was only one place to move him, and that was the prisoners' cage. They took him there and I followed. When I got there, he was in tears.

In the Hoosegow.

"'Now look what I get for calling you in,' he sobbed. I told him he wasn't a prisoner, showed him the open door, and tried to get him to tell me something about his family, but he'd have nothing more to do with me. I tracked down his registration, found the Pennsylvania town he came from, and addressed a special delivery letter to 'The Mother of Private So-and-So.' The next day a telegram came saying his wife and mother were on their way here, and asking me to meet them.

"Well, I met them and took them to the camp. It was Camp Alger. I spent some time trying to prepare the sick boy for the surprise I was planning, and then I showed the ladies in. He screamed. I was terrified. I thought I had killed him sure. But it turned into the happiest reunion I ever saw. They took him home with them and he lived until three years ago."

It is a matter of record in Red Cross annals that, some years later, at a great gathering of the Grand Army of the Republic, Mrs Spencer was publicly decorated for her humanitarian service in this instance. The silver medal, pinned to her gown by Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey, had been specially made at the order of the grateful soldier.

She, in turn, was so taken by surprise that she collapsed after the medal-pinning ceremony and was in bed a week.

"Oh, there were innumerable instances of that kind of thing all of us were constantly doing for the poor fellows," Mrs. Spencer said. "We made paper pillows. We shredded paper into fine strips and stuffed it into ticking to give the boys a comfortable rest for their heads.

"The finest women in Washington spent endless hours in our kitchen, preparing meals to eke out the soldiers' rations; to give them enough to eat. We kept a recreation house, where they could come for comfort and cheer."

She was silent for a space. Then she chuckled quietly.

"Boys don't change much, it times do. I had a great time during the World War. I lent lots of money out of my own pocket, and never lost but $1.75.

"A soldier came to our headquarters at 1418 Pennsylvania avenue, one day, looking for me. He told me he had done Red Cross work overseas and was speaking for the Liberty Loan here, but had lost his return ticket to New York City and had no money.

"He wanted $6 to get back to New York. All the women kept shaking their heads at me behind his back. But I took a chance. I said, 'I'm going to give you $10 out of my own pocket. If I never get it back, I'm the loser.' That was on Tuesday.

"On Friday, my husband telephoned to say there was a special delivery for me from New York. I called for it immediately, and what do you think? In it there was $25, one of those little silk aprons we used to wear, and a silk handkerchief.

"'The $15,' the letter said, 'is to treat the boys!'

"The $1.75 I lost? Well, $1.50 was given to a young chap who passed away shortly afterward of influenza. He had lost his return ticket to Camp Humphreys and appealed to me.

"The 25 cents——." She laughed heartily. "One day a young fellow from Iowa asked me for a quarter. After I had given it to him, a soldier standing by came up and very solemnly warned me I had done an unwise thing; that I'd never get the quarter back.

"I did, however. But my adviser borrowed a quarter some time later, which I never did get."

Happiness is the greatest salary a job can ever pay, in the opinion of Mrs. William S. Spencer, above, oldest woman in point of service of Washington's Red Cross workers. And it's the only pay she's ever had from the job to which she has devoted practically "full time" for 36 years.

Making A Distributional Slam.

The Four-Five Notrump convention undoubtedly has gone far to solve the problems of the Contract player who starts out seeking a Slam; yet, splendid as is this convention, which not only facilitates the undertaking of Grand Slam contracts on hands that should be bid to take all the tricks, but prevents the undertaking of such contracts when an Ace is missing, there are hands of a distributional nature in which the convention can not be used because the player does not hold the requisite 2 Aces and a King for a conventional bid of four notrump nor three Aces and a King for a bid of five notrump.

The hand below is one played in a recent team-of-four match in preparation for the Grand National of the United States Bridge Association now in progress at the Hotel Pierre in New York. It was played in the New York State Regional Tournament between the two teams contending for first place and, strangely enough, one of the teams reached the contract but failed to make it in the play through a lack of appreciation of the distributional situation, while the other stopped at five and equally failed to make six, although six should be made against any defense whatever.

3◇(2)	4♡(3)	Pass	6♡(4)
Pass	Pass	Pass

2—An equally valiant effort but also unavailing.
3—West has a very fine hand and any lesser bid would be entirely insufficient.
4—A slight overbid. In view of the diamond holding there is no assurance that a place can be found in the West hand to dispose of or ruff the losers.

The Opening lead where the six-heart contract was undertaken was the club 6, and in the play East made the mistake of playing a low club from Dummy and winning the trick in his own hand with the singleton Queen. Communication between the two hands was thus momentarily cut off. East, however, hoped to reestablish it if he could find two diamonds in the North hand or find the King of hearts in the South hand. He therefore laid down the Ace of diamonds and continued with another diamond, which was ruffed with the Queen in Dummy. North overruffed with the King and laid down the Ace of spades for the setting trick.

Strangely enough the same line of play was adopted by the holder of the East hand at the other table. However, as his contract was but five hearts, he was able to fulfill it. Actually, as the cards lie, six-odd can be made even against the Opening lead of the spade, and with a line of play both natural and correct. With the club lead, all that is necessary is to win the club in Dummy, lead the second round of clubs, discard the single spade and then take the heart finesse. At the end, of course, a diamond trick will have to be surrendered as only one diamond in addition to the Ace can be established as a trick winner, but this permits the Declarer to make 12 tricks. East, in both instances, should have been warned of the dangers attendant upon the line of play which he followed. It is true, of course, that this plan would fail if South held a singleton club, but in that case North would have held seven, and if that were so, there might still be a chance to make the contract if the King of trumps was found to be a singleton in either hand.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If East is playing a contract of three notrump, against which South makes the short-suit lead of the club 8, by what method should East seek to develop the tricks to fulfill his contract?

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

C. S. Bryan and W. L. Mallman confirm the teaching of Dr. Lloyd Arnold that bacteria placed on the surface of the skin die very quickly. If the hands are thickly smeared with live, active and virulent bacteria, but a few minutes later it will be found that the organisms have died and most of them have disappeared. The skin is a wall designed to keep within all that belongs there and also to keep without whatever has no right inside.

It is something more than brick and mortar—a physical barrier. It is a compound of living cells, each having active work to do. These cells have a great bacteria killing capacity. So well accepted is the theory that skin cells can and do kill bacteria that many wonder whether ordinary antiseptic washing or painting the skin with antiseptics does any good, and some assert that doing so results in harm.

An explanation of this bacteria destroying power of the skin is offered by Bryan and Mallman. One conclusion is that it is one of the natural powers of the skin cells. However, it is greatly aided by drying. The bacteria on the skin surface rapidly dry out and when they do they become inactive and soon die.

The power of the skin cells to kill bacteria is greatly increased by exposure to sunlight. Part of this is due to the action of sunlight on the germs themselves. However, much of it is due to the effects on the skin cells. Some of the protective substance generated by action of light on the cells is absorbed into the body and becomes a part of the protective machinery of the body. Exposing the skin to ultra-violet light has the same effect.

Thermometers and Common Sense . . . .

It's a cold morning.
How did you know?
Did you look at the thermometer or did your tingling fingers shout the news? Perhaps the thermometer verified your own opinion but you knew it was cold before you looked. Your common sense told you.
Exactly!
When you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound or any other medicine—how do you know it helps you? Do you ask the neighbors? Do you try to figure it out on a scientific basis?
Certainly not.
You feel better and your common sense tells you what caused it.
Science may confirm your own opinion, but you knew it all the time.

Girl Who Talks With Scissors Here on Tour

Gene Ross, of Hollywood, Is Cutting Her Way Around the World.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

Miss Gene Ross, of Hollywood, is cutting her way around the world and finding it a hilarious adventure. She's had Presidents, movie queens, and Boston bluebloods in the snip of her scissors. Nor is not satisfied with past snippings. She's going in for bigger and blacker silhouettes, and she's not going home until she has Mahatma Gandhi, sheet and all, in her collection.

"The only thing that worries me about Gandhi is that if he keeps on fasting, he won't have any silhouette by the time I get to him," she said.

Four months ago Miss Ross started out from Hollywood with a pair of scissors, a tank full of gasoline and as for pennies, like Simple Simon, "indeed sir, she had not any."

She arrived in Washington yesterday with silhouettes of 15 governors and a book full of notes. She has a great purpose here. She belives that President Roosevelt "can be had" and she intends to have him, together with Mrs. Roosevelt and several other notables.

A Cutting Way.

"Where did I get the idea of cutting my way around the world?" She laughed. "You will never guess who first suggested it to me. It was Calvin Coolidge! Can you imagine that conservative New Englander advising a young girl to go vagabonding around the world? Well, he did.

"It was when he was Governor of Massachusetts and I was making his silhouette. He said: 'You should be able to do anything you want to. You don't need money. Why don't you travel around the world? You can talk with silhouettes. They are a universal language.'

"So I am on my way. The only other language I know is a little French. But I'm not worried. I'm going head hunting. I want Hitler, Mussolini, the Prince of Wales, and several kings and queens.

"In some ways I have let myself in for more than I thought. On the back of my car I have the words: 'Gene Ross, cutting my way around the world. Stop me for a silhouette!' Well, of course I travel entirely alone. I was coming through a particularly wild part of the Middle West, when I passed a truck load of terribly rough-looking men. As soon as they saw me they began crying out. 'Stop! We want a silhouette.' I took one look at them and stepped on the gas. I think I may have to change that sign.

Hair and Chins.

"Cutting silhouettes is a lot of fun. I started it 14 years ago to amuse some friends of my mother's. So I just drifted into it.

"You get to know a lot about people cutting their silhouettes. For instance—men. You would never think that men were vain about the back of their heads, would you? Well, they are. They want every little line just so, and every little hair in just the right place. Now, women are more interested in their chins. I am beginning to think chins are the most important things in a woman's life. They want to hold them in a certain way, and they worry all the time I am working for fear I won't do their chins justice. Double chins worry them terribly, too. I often get charitable and shave a little off a double chin. They like that.

"I meet a great many interesting people in my work, and get to know them intimately. Einstein was one of the nicest people I have ever met. But the way I met Calvin Coolidge was perhaps the funniest.

High-Hats Coolidge.

"I was 17 years old, and had an opportunity to make a silhouette of Gov. Walsh of Massachusetts. While I was waiting, this pale, blonde, nondescript-looking young man came in and began talking. Oh, he said, so you make silhouettes! Well, how about making one of me while you are waiting for the Governor?'

"I looked at him, and he was just an ordinary person like myself.

"'Very well,' I told him, haughtily. 'I will make your picture later. It is only fitting that you wait until I make the Governor's. And he waited. Later I found out that he was Calvin Coolidge, and lieutenant governor. And, of course, since then I have often laughed when I remember the time I kept the man who was later President waiting.

"There are some kinds of people who are much more interested in having their silhouettes made than are others. For instance, divorcees. The biggest business I have done so far was in Reno. All of the young divorcees wished to have a portrait of themselves. I don't know whether it was to win a new husband, or whether it was just a matter of pride."

Miss Ross has no definite plans for her trip. She just goes wherever her fancy takes her, and where the celebrities are thickest. She carries a projection lamp in her car, and she makes lectures on the way as she goes. She believes that the silhouette, or shade as she prefers to call it, is the oldest form of art in the world, and that many of the weird pictures found on the walls of cavemen's homes are old silhouettes.

"I believe that the cavemen tried to outline the shadows of their companions as they were reflected on the walls, and as you know, shadows are often distorted," she said. That explains the peculiar shapes of some of the people in the pictures. That, at least, is my theory."

Miss Ross is collecting notes on her travels. She intends to write a book and illustrate it with her silhouettes.

"I feel confident that I will be able to get the ones I want most," she said. "Very few people can resist the temptation to see how they look in black and white."

Photographed by Scalone, Paris.

Mme. Bruyere released exclusively to The Washington Post photographs of these two models from her new spring collection before the spring opening was held in Paris. The tailored suit on the left is gray flecked wool with glass buttons. Crepe arpette in young sprig green makes the dress. The stitched bands are of silver lame. A large green button closes the interesting neckline.

Culture Marts Needed. Club Women Hear

Dr. Howe Urges Near-City Exchanges for Eggs and for Ideas.

Organization of thousands of "cultural exchanges" in the neighborhood of the large cities, for the purpose of bringing city and country people closer together, was suggested last night by Dr. Frederic C. Howe, in a speech before the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in conference here.

Dr. Howe, who is consumers' counsel for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, said the cultural centers would operate in conjunction with practical suburban exchanges where butter and eggs and other farm products passed directly from the farmer to the city consumer, without the need of the middleman's services. He saw in such a movement the needed step toward breaking down the barriers of hostility and misunderstanding that ordinarily exist between city and farm dwellers.

"Through such exchanges would flow not only commodities—such as milk and eggs—but social and other relationships which would bind to the people of city and country together," he said.

Dr. Howe referred to the Food Exchange at Bethesda, outside Washington, as one of those which could become a point of cultural contact as well. In vivid language he painted the possibilities inherent in a project for exchanging intangible as well as consumable commodities.

Club women were urged by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward—speaking on the same program—"to study local and State conditions and needs and use all existing facilities to see that women get a fair share of the jobs available through civil works projects."

"There are more than 185,000 women at work all over the country on socially useful projects," Mrs. Woodward said. "This number is increasing daily, as projects are begun and funds made available. This accomplishment has been made possible through organization and splendid volunteer assistance given by the various women's organizations.

"In no other country in the world are school terms being shortened and children denied preparation for life," Miss Jessie Gray, president of the National Education Association, told club women at their morning session yesterday.

"Last spring, 2,269 schools were closed in 11 States of the United States."

A French "Original" Gown May Have a Life Of Strange Adventure Before It Is Worn

Often It Crosses the Ocean Three Times Before It's Seen in Public.

The spring openings of the great French couturieres are just beginning. In a few weeks some of the "original models" will reach our shores. And before Eastertime they will have been copied by manufacturers here—very accurately copied too—so that American women may have them at a reasonable price.

An original gown from one of the ateliers of the great dressmakers of the world has a value very akin to that of a precious stone that has been cut and placed in a setting by one of the world's great jewelers.

The gem may be copied very wonderfully in paste, or even in real stones, but the one that came from the hand of the great designer and workman will always be the more highly prized.

A Long Journey.

And a gown from the workshops of a Chanel or a Lanvin, a Schiaparelli or a Bruyere, may serve as the model for a thousand such dresses, apparently identical with the original. Yet an intrinsic merit, perhaps only one of sentiment, attaches to the original, which it can never lose, even though it may have journeyed around the world, and come home at last to Paris to be sold.

For that is precisely what happens to many an "original Paris gown."

There is much mystery in Paris before the spring and autumn showings. Even in the establishments of the couturieres, it is not to be imagined that everyone is "in on the secret" of what is going to be offered in the way of new and breath-taking designs. On the contrary, only a few of those closest to the great designer are allowed to get an inkling of what will be offered.

The great couturiere has worked in the seclusion of her private studio on the ideas which she hopes will win favor with women the world over. Her most trusted cutters and sewing women have assisted her.

A Few Who Betray.

Occasionally, one of these may betray her for a price to one of her competitors. It happens—not often—yet often enough it seems. Witness the occasional astonishing similarity of models proposed by the great dressmaking houses.

Then come the openings. Time was when only the aristocracy of the world were invited to see what the great designer had evolved. But that time is no more. The demands of well-to-do women of the world over have been so urgent, the clatter of their golden coins so real, that at present there is scarcely a great house which has not succumbed sufficiently to admit a few "buyers" to its formal showings of gowns.

These buyers return to America, to Australia, to South Africa and all the other places from which they came, with a careful selection of original models they deem the most suited to their country's women. Sports frocks and afternoon dresses, dinner and evening gowns—a magical array of the choicest creations of the designers of the world's fashion capital.

A Sad Fate for a Gown.

What happens to these jewel-like robes?

Their fate, from one point of view, is a tragic one. No sooner have they reached their destination than they are ruthlessly ripped apart. In some great dress factory of the United States, an original, its seams opened, is laid flat on the cutting table to serve as a pattern for a whole bevy of such gowns, of similar material, also carefully chosen. And these copies, but only one or two to a city, are then marketed throughout the country. Fortunate the woman who can afford one. For in every particular her gown will be identical with that which the genius of the Paris couturiere originated.

Once the "original" itself has served its purpose, it enters upon the most curious chapter of its history. In nine cases out of ten it is shipped back to Paris, in its ripped-up condition. Naturally it enters France duty free, being a French product.

It Comes Home Again.

In Paris the poor mutilated gown finds an eager purchaser in the head of one of that city's little model shops. Such shops, hidden away in odd corners of the city, are known only to a few discreet women customers, French, American and others, who have learned that there they may secure gowns with the allure, the authentic "cachet" of the maker—for a most reasonable price.

In the workroom of the model shop, reverent French hands put the ripped-up model carefully together again. The seams are sewn as beautifully as they were before, every stitch is as perfect as it was in the first place. With consummate skill, the wonderful model is restored.

Presently it stands forth without blemish or trace of its wanderings and adventures.

When next that particular "original" crosses the Atlantic, it may be in the wardrobe trunk of a beautiful girl from New York or Washington or Chicago, who could not quite afford a Paris gown straight from the hands of the great couturiere—but who has one, perhaps two or three or four or five of them, anyhow.

On Its Wanderings It's Been Ripped Up; Sewn Again and Sold.

And the gown, bearing somehow in its line and fit and grace the consciousness that it is no mere copy, will grace some social function with an hauteur and distinction that—at least in the mind of its wearer—no mere copy could ever quite achieve.

Ballerina Stepped on Wales' Toe, Found He Had Rhythm

But Alexandra Dainlova of the Ballet Russe Doesn't Think Much of the Way Americans Dance, or Applaud Either.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Prince of Wales is one of the world's best ballroom dancers, in the opinion of Alexandra Danilova, ballerina of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe.

Miss Danilova danced with him, and stepped on his feet—not only once, but twice. Dancing with royalty makes one nervous, she said today, because "everybody is looking at you."

"I begged his pardon, and he said it was his fault, that he was not good enough to dance with the best dancer in the world," said the ballerina, removing make-up from her eyelashes.

"The prince is a wonderful dancer. He has marvelous rhythm. I don't know any one I'd rather dance with again."

"They are not classic," she said. "They know one or two tricks, and they do those for five years. They learn these few things perfectly and dance beautifully, but there is nothing more."

American audiences she protested, are cold, but she classes the supposedly unresponsive English as "most appreciative audiences." She also thinks the English do the best ballroom dancing of any nation.

Beautiful Women Part Hair in Center

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—How and where to part—that's another 1934 feminine problem—for there are a number of new and interesting parts in the midwinter coiffures, as observed in hair-style demonstrations.

An increasing number of smartly dressed women are parting their hair in the middle with the approval of hairdressers, who warn that good features are necessary for this style.

One new fashion is to continue the middle part down the back of the head. Conservatively speaking, it stops within a few inches of the hair line, but one extreme and novel style is to continue the part to the hair line, combing the hair to the right and to the lef.

"Little Girl" Braids Set Fashion for Hair

The tiara is one thing but list'n to the story of the coronet braid in a nutshell. While all the little girls were going Alice-in-Wonderland-tiara-saucer eyes, Phil Dunning's daughter, Virginia, tugged her hair into braids long enough to wind over the top of her head and in a piquant way represented the newest hair fashion. There are no rules to this new game. If you aren't a Virginia with coronet braids of your own, just buy one and pin it on. It's not even necessary to wear it all the time, as the idea is simply not to be a total abstainer. Look "little girl" and don't worry about being accused of a mental disorder if you are coroneted tonight and not tomorrow, according to the smart young set.

Capital Visitor Gives Advice To Career-Girl

She Must Use Her Head But Act the Clinging Vine, She Suggests.

"How can I keep my sweetheart's love, and still succeed in business?" Hundreds of young women write to experts on heart affairs daily and anxiously ask this question.

Mrs. C. Montague Irwin, vice president of the International St. Lawrence Seaways Association, and the only woman connected with this enterprise, played the good Samaritan yesterday and came forward with a solution.

"There is one sure rule for success with men, both in business and private life. Play up to their vanity," Mrs. Irwin who is in the Capital for a brief visit, told a reporter in her room at the Mayflower.

"Never, never tell a man with whom you are associated in business what to do. If you have any suggestions to make, do it in such a way that he will think it was all his idea. And whatever you do, don't gloat if you accomplish something he has tried to do, and could not. He will never like you if you do.

"Then when you see your husband or sweetheart and he tells you how proud he is of your work, say sweetly, 'Thank you, dear, but I am sure you could have done much better,' or 'It was all your idea. I never could have thought it up alone.'

"Discuss your work as little as possible. When you leave your place of business take off your working clothes and your working personality, and be a sweet clinging vine.

"So you can see," she summed up, "how it all goes back to this matter of vanity. Be deferential to the men you work with, and pay homage to their superior brains."

Paris Is Still Aghast at Rise Of This Brilliant New Star

But Fashionable American Women Have Found in Her a Gifted Designer Whose Creations Are Peculiarly Suited to Their Own Pattern of Beauty.

Velvets, satins and silks, crispy mousselines and filmy chiffons. In the hands of the great masters of the dressmaking art they are the paints with which to fashion ravishing pictures. The life of a grande couturiere is a romantic one. It consists in creating that elusive thing: feminine loveliness. But there are only a few in the world who have learned to use these "paints" to perfection.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Scissors snip, needles fly, yards and yards of exquisite materials are spread upon the cutters' tables, and 250 pairs of hands are working at a dizzy rate of speed in a large workroom in the Rue de Mondovi, Paris. Suddenly a tiny, frail looking woman with silvery hair enters the room. Immediately 250 pairs of eyes center on her. It is Mme. Bruyere, head of one of the newest and already one of the most successful dressmaking houses in Paris.

She has come to tell her workers that everything is in readiness for the annual St. Catherine's Day party. Joyfully the scissors, needles, and materials are laid aside and the happy sewing women and girls troop merrily into a salon.

Young women who have had their twenty-fifth birthday within the last year and who are still unwed are guests of honor at the fete. St. Catherine is the patron saint of old maids and the girls who have reached the fateful twenty-fifth milestone are called Catherinettes. Every year Bruyere has a few workers who don the Catherinette bonnet.

Fun for Old Maids.

The grande couturiere holds a drawing at these annual parties. Prizes range from sheer stockings to fine dresses. Most important trophy of all is a ticket in the French national lottery in which the winner may gain as much as 100,000 francs.

Small wonder that Bruyere's workers adore her when she goes to so much trouble to give them happy times together. When they are not having a rollicking fete they are hard at work on Bruyere gowns and hats.

This designer, who makes a secret of her Christian name and wishes to be known simply as Bruyere, was born and spent her girlhood in the Province of Bourgogne, which is situated south of Alsace-Lorraine, near Switzerland. Bourgogne is an entrancing place. The winters are crisp and invigorating. The summers are halcyon and languorous. In these surroundings the little Bruyere first became conscious of beauty. She has carried her intense love of it into her creations which enhance the lovelliness of women.

School Days in Paris.

The Bruyere family was a fairly prosperous one—prosperous enough for the parents to send their little daughter to a good boarding school in Paris. The pupil endured mathematics and other hated subjects so that she could spend some time each day in the beloved drawing class. Her favorite teacher was a young painter who taught her interesting things about the combination of colors.

There was a time when Bruyere was determined to become a painter. But her brushes and palette had a serious rival in the form of a bewitching young lady with bright yellow hair and a permanent smile on her curved ruby lips. This young lady, with a luminous porcelain complexion, was Bruyere's favorite doll.

The little school girl spent hours and hours fashioning elaborate clothes for this yellow haired doll. Countless youngsters have done the same thing, but while they made dresses for their dolls because they loved the poreclain and sawdust figures, Bruyere simply used her doll as something to hang clothes on. The clothes were her real love—not the doll.

Doll Dresses.

Long after her friends had put away their playthings, Bruyere continued to make fanciful creations for the lifeless little figure with the fantastic yellow hair. Then one day she put the doll aside. She had decided to enter the school of the Beaux-Arts. She knew that she wanted to be a designer and realized that she needed more preparation than the boarding school had given her. Bruyere studied with intensity and constancy at the Beaux-Arts. She was especially interested in the history and manufacture of rich materials and frequented libraries and museums, learning to recognize the fashions of various periods.

This couturiere still gets many of her ideas by turning back to the past. Her vacations are spent in famous old treasure palaces and in museums where her eager blue eyes seize upon the pattern of a rare tapestry or upon the lines of a picturesque medieval costume. These inspirations are translated into modern terms by Bruyere when she returns to her Paris establishment.

Modelist for Lanvin.

After she had completed the courses in design at the Beanx-Arts, Bruyere entered the establishment of Jeanne Lanvin as a modelist, that is to say, a creator under the guidance of the grande couturiere. As modelist Bruyere had an opportunity to meet many of the distinguished clients who came to the House of Lanvin. She became especially interested in American women and made up her mind that if she ever had a place of her own, she would design things that would appeal to them.

A place of her own had long been a dream of Bruyere's. After six years with Lanvin, she dared to take the important step. That was five years ago and from the very first her establishment has enjoyed success—with Americans. The French success—with Americans. The French are still rather wary of entering its doors. But then the French are not the restless race that we are. They are not constantly seeking for something new, something different. The old, familiar places continue to hold their interest and their patronage.

But Bruyere is confident that the Parisiennes will eventually come to her. She remembers that Schiaparelli was also viewed askance when she opened her place. Gradually the French were won over to her. In the same manner, they will be won over to Bruyere. Meanwhile, she is having a splendid time dressing rich and fashionable Americans.

No Sausage Dresses.

Bruyere gives to each of her creations an amazing amount of originality. She believes that mass production has no place in the art of dressmaking and deplores its prevalence in this country where dresses are turned out as much alike as a string of sausages. No sausage dresses for Bruyere. Each of her things has a personal note and is meant for a certain definite type of woman.

In designing a costume this couturiere considers: First, the line; second, the finishing touches which are shorn of useless trimmings; and third, the richness of the coloring. She prefers dark, somber colors, but sometimes uses delicate, fresh hues to great advantage. In her spring, 1934, collection, the most important colors are gendarme blue and a young, springtime green.

Gray flannel figures prominently in the new collection. Silk and wool jersey are used for street and sports frocks, while Irish tulle makes a delectable party dress. Lustrous crepes of artificial silk, double-faced satins and sparkling lames are used for afternoon and evening gowns.

In the pleasant workroom where Mme. Bruyere plans all these creations are two haughty and magnificently gowned little ladies. They are city cousins of the yellow-haired doll that Bruyere spent so many hours dressing when she was a school girl.

Crowned With an Old Maid's Bonnet

St. Catherine is the patron saint of old maids in France. Every year on St. Catherine's Day, Bruyere gives a party for her employes and elaborate prizes are awarded. The five young girls in costume are the "bell-hops" of the establishment. Their work consists in threading needles, picking up scissors and running errands. The three in large paper hats, the traditional St. Catherine bonnets, are the old maids.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest.

Success and Failure.

Success and failure are a pair
Which wing together,
Two birds, almost alike I swear
Unto a feather.

Both fly about in plumage rich,
Man merely guesses
Which of the two is failure; which
Of the two success is.

Seeking the happier bird men go—
The search a long one—
And oft their truest shots bring low
The fateful, wrong one.

Another, oft it seems by chance
The trigger presses
And home he comes with eyes that dance.
His bird, success is.

But since so hard it is to tell
One from the other
Who wins should not forget how fell
His luckless brother.

NOW BUILDING THE WORLD'S LARGEST DISTILLERY AT PEORIA, ILLINOIS •

During the past 75 years, the distilled products of Hiram Walker & Sons have been favored with a wide popularity in the United States. Everywhere, the name of "Canadian Club" whisky is accepted as the symbol of quality in the highest degree.

The accomplishment of Repeal found Hiram Walker & Sons in the process of establishment on American soil as an American institution.

The people of this nation, we believe, crossed off the 18th Amendment because they regard Repeal as one of the great instruments for the return of national prosperity.

As the beginning of Hiram Walker & Sons' support of the effort working toward that objective, we are now erecting at Peoria, Illinois, the largest distillery ever built in the world, at an investment of $4,000,000.

Until this huge project is completed, we have two temporary plants at Peoria, operating with every leisurely process which contributes to the traditional goodness of Hiram Walker products.

Every year the Hiram Walker plant at Peoria will require millions of dollars' worth of American products. Farmers will find an annual outlet for some 6,000,000 bushels of their grain. Mines will ship us 350 tons of coal per day. Bottles, boxes, labels, and so on, will be required each year by the millions.

When Hiram Walker & Sons' distillery, the largest one in the world, is completed, it will employ 1,000 workers at Peoria, Illinois, and many others in large wholesale branches throughout the country. Hiram Walker & Sons will pay into the Treasury of the United States, through collection of taxes, more than $30,000,000 per year.

Quality is the basis on which the Hiram Walker business was founded in 1858. For 75 years it has been made the inflexible rule in every Hiram Walker process. It is the all-pervading principle of the new American business now in its beginnings. Your guarantee of quality and purity which you can trust is the Hiram Walker name, favorably known the world around.

[Today, "Canadian Club" whisky—each bottle bearing a government stamp to indicate its age and purity—and all other Hiram Walker products can be purchased wherever the law permits liquor to be offered for sale—but not elsewhere with our knowledge or consent. Thus we pledge ourselves to sincere co-operation in the strict observance of the spirit as well as the letter of the law, and the temperate use of our products.]

D. C. Liquor Bill Passage Seen Tuesday

Senate Committee Votes 5-5 on Licensing and Dispensary.

King Hopes Upper House Will Take Action on Monday.

Passage of the liquor control law seemed unlikely before Tuesday of next week yesterday, after the Senate District Committee appeared deadlocked, failed to complete its revision of the House bill.

The bill recommended by the District Commissioners, providing for private licensing and sale of liquor by the drink in licensed hotels, restaurants and clubs, is expected to be recommended by the committee and passed by the Senate.

The margin of victory for the license advocates, however, will be small. This was made clear in committee yesterday, when the 10 members present divided, five to five, for dispensary and for licensing. Senator Robert D. Carey (Republican), Wyoming, switched his vote on the informal poll so that the committee could go ahead with consideration of the measure.

How Vote Was Divided.

Those who voted for the dispensary system were reported to be Senators William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman; Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma; John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama; Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, and Senator Carey.

Those who were reported to have voted for the licensing system were Senators Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York; Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada; Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina; Warren Austin (Republican), Vermont, and James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania.

Of the five committee members absent, three were said to be for the licensing system and two for the dispensary system. Those favoring licensing were Senators Millard Tydings (Democrat), Maryland; J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, and Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), New Jersey.

Those favoring the dispensary plan were said to be Senators Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, and James Couzens (Republican), Michigan.

This division, if adhered to, means the licensing plan will be reported to the Senate by a margin of at least one vote.

Resumption Today.

The committee is to resume consideration of the bill this morning and Senator William H. King, (Democrat), Utah, chairman, said he hoped to sit throughout the day and tomorrow, if necessary, to finish the task.

Senator King said he was hopeful the bill would be taken up on the floor of the Senate and passed on Monday. If the Senate is not in session tomorrow, it will mean the committee can not make its report until Monday. The rules require a delay of one day before it can be brought up for consideration. This rule can be waived by unanimous consent.

Senator King said he intended to request consent and believed it would be given. Inasmuch as it will take only one senator to bloc that move, others were doubtful the bill could be brought up before Tuesday.

The committee yesterday amended the House bill to permit only retailers selling liquor, beer and wine for consumption off the premises to sell on credit. Hotels would be permitted to extend credit to registered guests, and clubs to members and their guests.

50-Room Minimum.

Fifty rooms was fixed as the minimum number which must be available for transients to justify issue of a hotel license. That figure was in the excise law in effect before prohibition. The House reduced the minimum to 30.

Another amendment would permit corporations to take out licenses for three separate establishments. This was designed to accommodate chain hotels and restaurants.

The committee also restored the clause giving Commissioners authority to limit the number of licenses of any class which may be issued. A proposal to limit drug stores to the sale of liquor on prescriptions by physicians was voted down.

Power Employe Dies of Injuries

Fall From Light Pole Fatal to Sherman Miller.

Sherman Miller, 27, a lineman for the Potomac Electric Power Co., died in Casualty Hospital yesterday from injuries received Monday when a light pole snapped at the base, plunging him 35 feet to the ground.

Miller had been employed as a lineman for several years. He lived at 4435 Prospect avenue, Brentwood, Md.

Temperance Leader to Speak.

"Outlook for Temperance in 1934" is the subject of an address by Dr. Tarleton T. Roberts, of the National Temperance Bureau, tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the League for the Larger life, 1414 Sixteenth street northwest.

Western High Pupils Crowded Into Corridors

Mystery Quiz Fatal to Man Found in Door

Salesmen Expires Without Gaining Consciousness; Trio Freed.

Smith died without regaining consciousness.

Less than three hours before he succumbed, police released three men questioned in the case. They were George W. Quinn, 60; James Miller, 36, and John Sanders, 26, arrested when police raided the Eleventh street building after Smith was found.

The men are alleged to have admitted they were drinking with Smith before he was injured. With a fractured skull, black eye and severe lacerations, Smith was found at the foot of a stairway by Policeman Edward Comingore.

He had been employed by a distilling company for many years, and lived at the Harrington Hotel. His wife, Mrs. Marie Smith, of 110 Kennedy drive, Chevy Chase, Md., said her husband had no enemies.

A coroner's investigation has been ordered.

Spur War on Disease, Dr. Albritton Urges

Importance of continued medical investigation so cancer, heart disease and tuberculosis will be conquered was stressed last night by Dr. Errett C. Albritton, of George Washington University School of Medicine, in a radio talk. Dr. Albritton spoke on "Society's Debt to the Labatory."

Yeggmen Steal Drugs and $850

Yeggmen smashed and bored their way through two reinforced doors of a Peoples Drug Store, 3200 M street northwest, early yesterday, ripped the combination from a safe, and escaped with narcotics and cash totaling $900.

Clyde E. Allnut, assistant manager, told police the intruders broke a third-story window. A quarter-inch drill was used on two doors leading into the drug store proper, he said.

Police said the robbery was apparently the work of expert cracksmen. The drug loot included morphine, codine and cocaine. The missing cash was estimated at $850.

Castle Manor Sold On $250,000 Bid

Castle Manor, five-story apartment building at 2515 Thirteenth street northwest, containing 69 apartments, was sold at public auction yesterday to Edkin J. Noyes for $250,000. Mr. Noyes, sole bidder, represented holders of the first trust.

The sale wa sadvertised by Washington Loan & Trust Co., trustee. Vernon G. Owen was the auctioneer.

This building is the northernmost of two brick, stone and reinforced concrete structures erected in 1925 by Highview Construction Co. at a total estimated cost of $800,000. B. Stanley Simmons was architect and George E. Wyne, builder.

The assessed valuation is $270,920, of which $15,920 represents land and $255,000 building.

Driver Crashes Stores; Blames Dizzy Spells

Ayres was uninjured. He told police he collapsed at the wheel of his car. Since he suffered injuries in an accident several weeks ago, Ayres said, he has had frequent dizzy spells.

Gas Valuation Boosted Again On New Dollar

President Roosevelt's intention of further devaluating the dollar until it reaches the 1926 level, was blamed yesterday by the Washington Gas Light Co. for increasing its valuation figures by about $2,000,000 at the hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Stone & Webster's expert witnesses recalculated their figures on cost of reproduction and original cost, heretofore submitted as of June 30, 1932, in terms of 1926 dollars on the theory that the country shortly will return to this monetary standard.

Thus the cost of reproduction was raised from $19,947,371 to $22,704,003 and the original cost was increased from $20,518,392 to $23,390,966. The index figure used was 114 per cent meaning that the 1926 dollar in terms of utility properties must add 14 cents to buy as much as the 1932 dollar.

This was not the first time the gas company capitalized on the fluctuating dollar to raise its valuation. Several days ago its figures for original cost were revised in terms of 1932 dollars to raise the valuation more than $3,000,000.

S. F. Kosters, of the Stone & Webster staff, yesterday completed several weeks' testimony and cross-examination, and the long drawn-out hearing moved another step toward the close.

The gas company Monday will enter the depreciation and the going concern value phases, both of which are expected to be objects of renewed attacks.

Just how much longer the hearing will continue is problematical. It started early in November, and the commission then predicted it would be ended by Thanksgiving.

William A. Roberts, special counsel of the commission, said the commission's testimony will require only a week to present after the gas company completes tis case, but then the utility attorneys doubtless will conduct a lengthy cross-examination.

Proponents of Peace Organize New Society

A new society for the abolition of war was formed in Washington last night.

Its founders christened it, tentatively, the Society for the Preservation of International Peace. Temporary officers elected were H. V. Schrieber, president, and Mrs. Elizabeth White Murray, secretary. The next meeting will be held in about two weeks.

Government Employe Files $100,000 Suit

Alleging he had been accused of trickery in connection with note transactions with other employes of the Government Printing Office, James E. Rennie, 1368 Kenyon street northwest, yesterday in District Supreme Court filed suit against George H. Cartes, Public Printer, for $100,000.

Nathan Wyeth Will Become City Architect

The District Commissioners today will formally appoint Nathan C. Wyeth, prominent Washington architect, as municipal architect in charge of construction.

Wyeths' appointment was announced yesterday by Engineer Commissioner Gotwals, after hte architect had consented to accept. He wil fill the vacancy created by the death last February of Albert L. Harris, but he will exercise more authority by taking over many of the duties of the director of construction, a job from which Harold Baker recently resigned.

Wyeth has been associated in designing of some of the Capital's most notable buildings, or with their revision. He was associated with designing of the House and Senate Office Buildings and the new wing of the latter.

Other work in which he participated was designing of the Key Bridge, remodeling of the executive office of the White House, Emergency and Columbia hospitals, Tidal Basin Bridge, the Swedish Legation, Chilean Legation, the Russian and Mexican Embassies, the principal memorial at Arlington Cemetery, the House of Mercy, and the Children's Country Home.

A graduate of the Beaux Arts School, University of Paris, Wyeth began his career with the New York firm of Carrage and Hastings, and was subsequently associated with the supervising architect's office of the Treasury. He is a fellow of the American Institute of Architects.

Vincent W. Hughes Burial Tomorrow

Funeral services for Vincent W. Hughes, of 1428 Shepherd street northwest, assistant director of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, who died in Emergency Hospital Wednesday night following a heart attack, suffered at his desk earlier in the day, will be held tomorrow morning in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth street and Park road. Time of the services and place of burial had not been decided on last night.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the division in which Hughes was employed, paid high tribute to his late assistant. Hughes had been in conference with Hoover only a quarter of an hour before he was stricken.

He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Viola Marinelli Hughes, and four children, Mrs. Charles Hardison, Vincent W. Hughes, jr., and Paul and John Hughes. He also leaves a brother and four sisters

Caemmerer to Speak.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, will speak on "Washington, the National Capital," before the Columbia Technical School, 1319 F street northwest, next Tuesday night. The lecture will be illustrated.

Allen, Hazen Given Senate Confirmation

No Complaints Received to Block Action, King Reports.

Garnett Is Approved by Subcommittee; Fight on Miss Bentley.

Appointment of George E. Allen and Melvin C. Hazen as District Commissioners was confirmed by the Senate yesterday.

The Commissioners were appointed November 14 and took office November 16, at which time Commissioner Hazen was elected president of the board of three. Maj. John C. Gotwals, Army Engineer Corps, is the third and Engineer Commissioner.

Hazen's appointment was sponsored by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, retired, and that of Allen was endorsed by Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi.

No Complaints Made.

Favorable report on the Commissioners was made by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the District Committee. No complaints were received against confirmation of either, Senator King said.

When the nominations were reached in executive session of the Senate yesterday, and the Vice President declard that, without objction, the nominations would be considered confirmed, nothing else wassaid on the subject.

Approval of the nomination of Leslie C. Garnett to be United States district attorney to succeed Leo A. Rover was voted by a judiciary subcommittee, of which Senator King was chairman. Senators Matthew M. Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, and Arthur Robinson (Republican), Indiana, were other members of the subcommittee.

Report is to be made to the full committee, of which Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Democrat), Arizona, is chairman, on Monday. Senator King said no objections had been voiced to Garnett's appointment.

Bentley Dispute Arises.

Dispute has arisen, however, over the appointment of Miss Fay Bentley to judge of the District Juvenile Court. Senator King, chairman of the subcommittee to which that appointment was referred, said he would make no effort to assemble the subcommittee until after the District liquor law had been disposed of and signed by the President.

Miss Bentley was given a recess appointment by the President. She has not been sworn in because Judge Kathryn Sellers, incumbent, pointed out the law fixed the term of a judge until such time as a successor had been confirmed by the Senate.

Judge Sellers' determination to remain until that provision had been complied with was a surprise. Miss Bentley made no move to assume office.

Weightman 3d Again Faces Check Charge

Two allegedly worthless checks for a total of $31, which he is said to have passed here in March, 1930, today will lead William Weightman 3d, scion of a prominent Philadelphia family to police court here.

Weightman was arrested in a downtown garage when he went there to get his automobile. The complainant is Sol Gordon, of 2102 New York avenue northwest. Police said Weightman has been living for some months in Sterling, Va.

In 1928 Weightman was arrested here after he gave a worthless check in payment for an automobile, which he wrecked the same day on the Baltimore Highway, near Elkridge, Md. At his trial he was placed on probation. A few days previously he had crashed in an airplane at Langdon Field, Baltimore.

Weightman was heir to the estate of his grandfather, who was a partner in the chemical firm of Powers & Weightman, Philadelphia. When taken into custody yesterday, police said Weightman admitted having faced numerous charges in Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York.

Woman's $25,000 Suit Claims Taxi Injuries

The Independent Taxi-Owners Association and Henry Haines, 5503 Fourth street northwest, yesterday were named defendants in a $25,000 damage suit filed here.

Mary Durso, 3634 Eleventh street northwest, plaintiff, says she was injured July 6, 1933, when struck by a cab at New Hampshire avenue and Spring road northwest. She says the cab was driven by an agent of Haines.

Captain of Washington Navy Yard Transferred to Boston

Capt. Berrier Leaves Here Feb. 1; Capt. Jackson Succeeds Him.

Capt. Frank D. Berrien, since 1930 captain of the Washington Navy Yard and assistant superintendent of the Naval Gun Factory, yesterday was ordered to the Navy branch of the Hydrographic Office, Boston.

He will be relieved February 1 by Capt. Edward S. Jackson, now a member of the Navy Department General Board.

Commander of the destroyer U. S. S. Nicholson during the World War, Capt. Berrien was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his part in the capture of the German submarine U-58. He also received the Order of Companion of St. Michael and St. George from the British government.

Capt. Berrien was born in Galesburg, Ill., August 17, 1877, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from the Second Iowa District. He was appointed naval port officer, Bordeaux, France, in November, 1918, and the following August was assigned to duty as chief of staff in charge of destroyer squadrons No. 2 and No. 4, Pacific fleet. He was transferred to Washington from command of the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington.

Capt. Jackson came to the Navy Department from command of the battleship U. S. S. New York. Previously he had been in command of the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Langley and the naval air station at Lakehurst. During the war he served as ordnance inspector at Philadelphia and Camden shipyards. He was born in Harford, Pa., February 21, 1878, and went to the Naval Academy from the Eleventh Pennsylvania District.

Duke Judges Refuse Order For Cummings

Lawyer Withholds Reason for Attachment on Attorney General.

Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings yesterday escaped "attachment" on order of the District Supreme Court because Jesse C. Duke, who sought the attachment, refused to reveal what he expected to show through Mr. Cummings' proposed testimony.

Duke, facing disbarment for making accusations concerning Justice F. D. Letts, District Supreme Court, and Leo A. Rover, United States Attorney, asked an attachment when, for the second day, the Attorney General failed to show up in response to a subpoena.

Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, and Associate Justices Jennings Bailey and Daniel W. O'Donoghue, asked Duke what he wished to prove by Cummings. Refusing to disclose his plans, Duke said that he wanted the record to show that Cummings had not responded.

After running through a list of minor defense witnesses, Duke announced that he would take the stand, and launched a detailed explanation of how he became associated with the rum ring conspiracy trial, from which arose the present proceedings.

He said the wife of one of the convicited conspirators came to him with a tale of "distressing conditions" in her home. Because of that, he said, he agreed to atssist in prosecuting an appeal. It was in the preparation of this appeal that he made the charges against Justice Letts and Rover. Duke was in the midst of his story when court was adjourned to today.

Jobless Woman Commits Suicide

Body Is Found in Gas-Filled Apartment.

The body of Mrs. Gladys Irene Brown, 45, was found slumped in a rocking chair in the kitchen of her gas-filled apartment, 1329 Belmont street northwest, late yesterday. Every jet in the cooking range was open. Emergency Hospital physicians said she had been dead two days.

When Bennie Latham, manager, smelled gas yesterday he forced the door. A sealed letter, addressed to her attorney, Andrew Wilson, of the Woodward Building, was on a table.

Police learned Mrs. Brown had been without work for some time, and that her father died recently. She is survived by two brothers, Roy B. Brown, of Minneapolis, and Cecil L. Brown, of Los Angeles.

Maj. L. W. Fagg Rites Tomorrow

Officer, Whose Wife Is Here, Killed by Car.

Death of Maj. Lawrence W. Fagg, U. S. A., 42, whose wife is Mrs. Virginia E. Fagg, 2551 Seventeenth street northwest, was reported yesterday to the War Department. Maj. Fagg was killed in an automobile accident near Union City, Pa. He was stationed at Groves City, Pa., as a National Guard instuctor. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery tomorrow.

Maj. Fagg was born in Fame, Miss., in 1890. He served through the ranks from 1912. He was appointed second lieutenant of Infantry in 1917 and became a major in 1929.

Living Costs Increase Here 6.5 Per Cent

Figures Which Barred Pay Restoration Made Public.

Survey Shows Raise in District Since June Ranks Third.

Figures behind the cost of living report which failed to give President Roosevelt authority to restore the 15 per cent pay cut, were released by the Labor Department yesterday showing an increase of 6.5 per cent in living costs in Washington since June, 1933.

Although the analysis showed a National nicrease of 5.2 per cent since June, these costs were set at 21.2 per cent under December, 1929, and 37.6 per cent under 1920 expenses. For Washington, the report showed costs have declined 34.6 per cent since 1920 and 17.3 per cent since December, 1929.

The President was authorized by law to restore part or all of the pay cut if living costs rose to within 15 per cent of those of 1928. As general costs were found to be 21.1 per cent under the 1928 index, he had no power to restore any of the reduction.

For the Nation, yesterday's report indicated that rents showed the largest decline of all living expense items since 1928, although Washington placed last in this respect with a decline of but 14 per cent. Rent decreases went as high as 56.9 per cent in Birmingham, Ala.

Clothing Led Jump.

All principal items in living costs, except rent, showed increases since June for Washington. The report showed food as advancing 9.5 per cent in the six months; clothing, 15.4 per cent; fuel and light, 4 per cent; household furnishings, 11.2 per cent, and miscellaneous items increasing 1.2 per cent.

The items weer below 1928 costs by many points, however. On the basis of 100 for 1928 costs, food stood at 69.2; clothing, 81.3; rent, 85.7; fuel and light, 91.9; household furnishings, 85.2, and miscellaneous items, 99.1.

Thirty-two cities were covered by the report, and Washington placed third in greatest advance of costs in the June-December, 1933, period. The greatest rise occurred in Norfolk, where expenses advanced 8 per cent. Jacksonville, Fla., showed the second greatest rise with 7.4 per cent, and Richmond, Va., and Scranton, Pa., ranked with Washington in the 6.5 per cent increase.

Secretary Perkins, in announcing the figures, said that hereafter the Labor Department will revise every 10 years the items entering into the standard of living survey, to keep abreast of living conditions. She indicated that such items as automobile depreciation, tires, gasoline, radios and similar expenses ought properly to be included now in any cost of living survey.

She also asserted that a periodic standard and cost of living survey ought to be made. She suggested one every 10 years, using a group of urban and rural centers as indices for the whole country.

Wage Increase Factor.

Part of the increased costs should be attributed to improved conditions of labor under the recovery program, Miss Perkins said, but she was careful to emphasize that this was not the sole factor entering into the advance. She indicated that a survey now under way in her department showed weekly wages in practically all industries have increased.

"When compared with the average for December, 1927, and June, 1928," Miss Perkins announced, "the general cost of living index for the United States for December, 1933, shows a decrease of 21.1 per cent. Detroit, Mich., and Birmingham, Ala., experienced the largest decrease with a fall of 27.6 per cent. The smallest decrease occurred in Portland, Me., where living costs for the average wage earner's family fell by 17.4 per cent.

"During this period, rents fell by 34.5 per cent for the country as a whole. Food declined by 31.6 per cent; housefurnishings by 18.8 per cent, clothing by 17.9 per cent, fuel and light by 11.6 per cent and miscellaneous items 4.5 per cent.

Evan Tucker Will Help Push Old-Age Bill

Charities Board Reports 773 Families Under Care in December.

The board of managers of the Associated Charities yesterday appointed Evan H. Tucker to represent the society on the committee of the Council of Social Agencies before Congress in support of the citizens' old age security act, approved by the board at a previous meeting.

Trustees named yesterday for the Community Chest this year were Miss Helen Nicolay and the general secretary, Walter S. Ufford.

The adoption law, recently drafted by representatives of social agencies under the leadership of the Juvenile Protective Association, was referred to Arthur Hellen for study and report at the next meeting.

Cash Relief Approved.

The board approved a recommendation of its executive committee authorizing visitors of the society to substitute cash relief for grocery orders where in their judgment, such substitutions would be in the interest of the client in promoting economy and maintaining indepedece ad iitiative of families under their care.

Visitors yesterday reported 773 families under care in December, including 239 given incidental servince. There were 81 further requests for investigation of references.

Training Set-up Discussed.

A new set-up in student training, under which college graduates attending the National Catholic School of Social Service, are giving service to the Associated Charities, was discussed by Miss Katherine Griffith, supervisor.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, chairman. Others present were Col. H. O. Atwood, Dr. Arthur Deerin Call, Edward F. Colladay, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Arthur Hellen, Coleman Jennings, Mrs. Frederick W. McReynolds, C. C. Morgan, Mrs. E. K. Morris, Miss Helen Nicolay, Miss Lucy D. Slowe, Miss Florence P. Spofford, Evan H. Tucker and George S. Wilson.

Good morning! This is for congressmen and senators, for political students and industrial representatives. For men who are doing everything in their power to speed recovery, who know that recovery means higher prices, who must still budget their own expenditures out of low incomes. Our prices have gone down before they go up, and we urge you to visit us today if you can.

Maryland Conquers Duke Quintet With Last-Half Attack, 37 to 33

Furious Rally Marks Final Minute

Bernie Buscher Scores Deciding Goal After Foul Ties Score.

A THRILLING rally in the last minute and a half of play, in which Bernie Buscher won the game with two field goals, gave Maryland a 37-to-33 victory over Duke last night at Ritchie Coliseum.

The lead changed hands nine times in the first half, which resulted in a battle between the scoring aces of the teams.

Duke pulled away to a 28-to-22 lead in the second half with only five minutes of play remaining and started freezing the ball. Roy Yowell, who had been on the bench, was injected into the fray and immediately gave the Terps a new lease on life, sinking three field goals in rapid-fire order to bring Maryland to within 30 to 33 of the visitors.

Duke called for time out, but immediately after the resumption of play, Bucky Buscher dropped a long pot-shot, and Vincent drew two fouls, sinking one to tie the score. Bernie Buscher then came through with his two game-winning field goals.

Derby Purse Cut $20,000

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 11 (AP).—Reduction to $30,000 in the added value of the Kentucky Derby was announced tonight by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the American Turf Association and executive director of Churchill Downs.

The sixteenth running of the Derby will be on Saturday, May 5. The classic has carried $50,000 added for approximately ten years. Its actual value will be increased according to the number that start, and the 1934 field so far is a wide-open one. Fees for 21 starters would add $10,000 to the $30,000 purse the Downs will put up.

Col. Winn atnnounced a one-third reduction on general admission tickets Derby day and a one-half reduction for general admission on all other days of the spring meet. Reductions also were announced in all grandstand and clubhouse boxes and on single reserved seats.

Washington-Lee Five Routed by Gonzaga

Gonzaga Prep scored an easy win over Washington-Lee High School yesterday on the Preps' floor, 32 to 16. With Jack Halloran leading the attack with 8 points, the Purple team ran up a 17-to-6 count at the half.

Kaminsky was best for the Little Generals with a trio of fouls and a single charity fling.

Can Spring Be Far Behind?

2 Racing Bills Introduced In Virginia

Supporters Predict One of Tracks Would be Run Near Alexandria.

By a Staff Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Jan. 11.—A movement to legalize horse racing in Virginia took definite form today with introduction of two track bills in the House of Delegates. The measures, sponsored by Delegate Wilburg C. Hall, Leesburg, House Finance Committee chairman, would establish a State racing commission and authorize operation of either pari-mutuel or certificate wagering systems at three tracks contemplated.

It was considered likely, however, that all betting would be through pari-mutuel machines should the bills be passed.

One Near Alexandria.

Supporters of racing legislation predicted plants would be located near Alexandria, Virginia Beach and Charlottesville. One of the bills would permit 50 qualified voters of any county or city to petition for a referendum to decide whether racing should be allowed.

The governor would be authorized to appoint a racing commission of three members, each to be bonded at $50,000. The commissioners would receive $10 a day or a maximum of $1,200 a year each.

Wide powers over the sport would be vested in the commission. Racing would be limited to three tracks with total meetings of 100 days annually. No purse less than $600 could be offered for any race.

3½ Per Cent to State.

Three and a half per cent of all money wagered would go to the State. In addition, the State would receive 10 per cent of all admission fees. Seventy-five per cent would go into the general State fund, while the remainder would be used by the Virginia Association of Fairs as premium awards for live stock and agricultural exhibits at State and county fairs.

Backers estimate State racing revenue would range between $225,000 and $750,000 annually.

Intramural Program At Virginia Ambitious

University, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—What has been called the most ambitious intramural program ever devised at the University of Virginia will be followed here this winter.

Fraternities and other organizations will compete in basket ball, handball, boating, swimming, and ping pong. Cups will be awarded organizations winning in each sport and a large cup will go to the one which wins with most consistency in all sports.

Penn Swimmers Invade Tomorrow

Shoreham Girls to Seek Revenge for Loss.

Headed by Marie Duval and Rita Augusterfer, the Shoreham girls' swimming team will make a concerted effort to reverse a previous loss to the Penn A. C. in a return meet here tomorrow night. Leonora Taube, Lois Bates, Annabelle Whaler, Betty Kline and other Shorehamites are expected to play a prominent part in opposing the Quaker City aggregation which handed the lassies from the Venetian Pool their initial setback since 1931.

Capt. Florence Peck, of the Penn team, who carried off honors in the December meet in Philadelphia, is scheduled for several of the events here. In the highboard diving, Connie Renninger will be the lone Penn representative to oppose both Marie Duval and Lois Bates.

The meet is scheduled to start at 8:30. Exhibition races and diving will be given between matches.

World Tennis Open Play Looms

NEW YORK, Jan. 11 (AP).—Fresh impetus appeared generated today for the proposals to make National, as well as world, open championships a definite part of the tennis tournament program, following Big Bill Tilden's decisive victory over Ellsworth Vines last night before a record American tennis gallery in the first of their series of professional matches.

Tennis authorities outside the professional camp were reluctant to predict what will be done this year, but it was learned that the Franch may take the initiative in persuading the International Tennis Federation this March to lift the barrier heretofore raised against sanctioning the mingling of amateurs and professionals in open competition.

The prospect is that the French tennis leaders, seeking an outstanding attraction to make up for the loss of the Davis Cup matches in Paris, will swing over to the side of open tournament advocates and seek to stage the first official world championship this year, before or after Wimbledon. Before this transpires, however, they may have to do some tall negotiating with Messrs. Tilden, Vines and Henri Cochet, who have joined professional forces.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association made a gesture of defiance last year by sanctioning a National open tournament, but failed to conduct the event, ostensibly because of failure to agree on dates with the Germantown (Pa.) Cricket Club. The U. S. L. T. A. meets this February in Pittsburgh and may pave the way for definite action, pending what transpires abroad.

The Yale Situation

By Paul Gallico.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Yale old grads are still frantically marketing for a new football teacher to the apparent distress of Mal Farmer, director of athletics at that venerable seat of learning. From what I can gather in a brief stopover in this brisk and vital metropolis, en route home, Mr. Farmer would like to restore T. A. D. Jones to the football professorship. The old grads would like to hire Harry Kipke, of Michigan, or some other modern and enterprising young football genius who can teach the Yales how to block, tackle and kick.

The old grads are tired of going to the Yale Bowl Saturday after Saturday and watching the students trip over their own feet, take themselves out, run up the backs of their own interference and tackle oncoming ball carriers like superannuated sports writers playing touch football. You could go to any Yale game this past year and see pairs of old grads wrapped in one another's arms, blinding their eyes from the scene on the field and moaning softly to themselves.

I am at this writing neither in sympathy with the old grads nor with Mr. Farmer, whose position seems to be threatened by his resistance to the alumni pressure. I am wondering why nobody inquires of the student body at Yale whether they would like a new football coach; and if so, why? Or don't the students count? I suppose not. They are only the ones who pay the tuition fees and who in a small measure play the football.

In the football hierarchy, the football player ranks last. He reports when he is told to do so, hits the line, or runs the end as directed, goes to bed at 10 o'clock and takes the raps. The boys who attend colleges in this country are just a little too young. If they were a few years older, as they are in the European universities, they would turn the whole caboodle out, graduate managers, athletic councils, old grads, coaches, et aliquod, and run the show themselves.

I was an eyewitness to several of the Yale games this past season and while I have no trained football eye it did seem to me that the athletes in the blue shirts were concerned more with theory and maneuver than with what is known as fundamentals. They had some nice plays, but they didn't know how to execute them. I thought it made for amusing ball games, but the old grads died in droves.

The negotiations with Kipke are being conducted in the usual manner. The Yales deny that they are dealing with him. Kipke has denied that he is dealing with the Yales and states that he is perfectly satisfied where he is. The next announcement will be that Kipke has signed with Yale for five years. Nobody will ever tell the press exactly what is going on. I suppose it is none of our business, our function being purely commercial, to advertise the games, the coaches, the crowds, the players and the stadium from October to December, in return for 8 inches of working space in a lanky press box.

The Yales must need dough, or there wouldn't be all this fuss about acquiring a good football coach. I suppose that the Yale Bowl is still calling for 6 per cent per annum payments, and, of course, intramural sports cost like hell in this country. Intramural sport doesn't seem to cost much in England where the boys put on a pair of old pants and a shirt and go out and play rugger all afternoon with a ball that was manufactured in the reign of good Queen Bess and have a swell time. The boys over here don't like to play with a $20 Spalding intercollegiate football after it has become a little grass-stained and are inclined to holler over to the side lines to the $5,000-a-year athletic checkroom boy for a new one. All this runs into money as do the helmets and pads and Scotch wool jerseys that the high-pressure athletic goods salesmen sell the colleges in carload lots.

The Yales have always been diffident about admitting that there was any financial aspect to the greater intercollegiate sport, insisting that it is all pour le sport, but whenever you see the boys out shopping for a new football coach and staff complete, you know that the bursar has fired a sheaf of bills onto prexy's desk demanding: "How in the —— (you know), am I going to pay THESE?"

The old grads would like to see a winning football team to bolster their pride, but I do not imagine that the university would mind seeing the same thing happen to the athletic bank account. The customers in the bowl were powerful sparse this year past.

The one thing that the Yales do not have to shop for, once they get their coach, is football players. They get the best material in the world from their farms at Exeter, Andover, Worcester and Lawrenceville and other way stations on the minor league football circuit, and if they will just come up with some one who knows how to teach the boys to hoist up and lay down their dogs in the proper order, you will see football reborn at dear old Eli. I'm for it.

Snavely, Bucknell, Seeks N. C. U. Berth

Makes Second Visit Anent Grid Coach Application.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 11 (AP).—Carl Snavely, Bucknell coach, paid the University of North Carolina a second visit today and conferred with R. A. Fetzer, director of athletics, and Dr. Roy Roberson, members of a committee appointed by the athletic council to survey the field of men available for the coaching job here and make recommendations.

Snavely's first visit was during the Christmas holidays. He admitted he was here to discuss the coaching situation, but said he had not been offered the job here and expected to leave tonight.

Fetzer said he did not know when another meeting of the council would be called, but that probably none would be held this week.

Hamas Carded For Schmeling

Managers Agree on Terms; Bout Set for Feb. 14 in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 11 (AP).—The promotorial firm of Taylor & Gunnis today announced that managers of Max Schmeling and Steve Hamas had agreed to a 12-round bout in Convention Hall here, February 14, and that papers for the match will be signed Monday.

Promoter Herman Taylor said negotiations, deadlocked yesterday after a controversy over terms, were completed this afternoon in New York by him.

He said that Joe Jacobs, manager of Schmeling, had agreed to 35 per cent of the gate for the former world's heavyweight champion and that Charlie Harvey, Hamas' pilot, had agreed to take 20 per cent.

The controversy arose over terms yesterday when Jacobs held out for 40 per cent while Harvey demanded 25 per cent.

The two managers also had failed to agree yesterday in the matter of rounds, Jacobs wanting the fight at 15 rounds and Harvey at 10.

While the State Athletic Commission has not formally sanctioned the go at 12 rounds, Commissioner Robert Nelson said today he could be "quoted as saying 12 rounds would be O. K."

Two Interhigh Tilts Slated Today

That there is a well-conceived surprise remains to be seen. Tech topped Eastern, previously undefeated, to upset the dope, while Western showed above expectations and preseason rating in losing to the defending champion Central outfit last Tuesday.

Roosevelt-Central Feature.

The headlining attraction is the nightcap encounter featuring the debut of Roosevelt in the series and Central, crippled somewhat by the loss of its first-string left guard, Rube Hayman, barred from further play for the season by a ruling of the high school principals yesterday. Hayman's berth probably will be taken over by Buddy Nau, who has been slowed up this season due to sickness.

Roosevelt, which has been playing spectacular ball since the Christmas holidays by running up a string of seven straight wins over District high schools, will prove anything but a walkaway for the Central team. In Rex Smith and Jimmy Cavanaugh, the Ruf Rider five has a classy pair of floormen. Smith, incidentaly, is a former Central player.

Featuring for Central, of course, is the fancy passing and shooting of Bits Keyser and the long-distant snaring of Mario "Mussie" Gregorio, center and forward, respectively.

Stadtler Bears Watching.

"Skat" Stadtler, mite foward of Western, by his fine play against Central last week may prove to be a virtual thorn in the Tech side. Stadtler scampered and stole the dribble continually in his play Tuesday and earned for himself the right to be rated as one of the best players in the series.

Jimmy Corcoran and Jim Forney—it was the latter who played throughout the Central game Tuesday with a broken finger—showed up in fine style, and it may be with this trio that Western will break the jinx of 20 straight losses in interhigh series play.

Reds Select O'Farrell As Pilot

Sign Him for Two Years as Player-Manager; Vance in Rumor.

Sylvester Johnson Also Acquired in Trade With Cardinals.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 11 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds tonight announced the signing of Bob O'Farrell, of the Cardinals, as a player-manager for the coming baseball season.

With O'Farrell the Reds acquired Sylvester Johnson, once called "the unluckiest pitcher in the National League." For the two they sent to St. Louis some cash and young Glenn Spencer, a pitcher obtained from the Giants barely a few weeks ago.

On top of it all came seemingly well-grounded reports that Dazzy Vance, the old mound veteran, also will exchange a Cardinal uniform for that of the Reds before the season opens.

Gets Two-Year Contract.

O'Farrell, President Larry MacPhail announced, has signed a two-year contract to tackle the job of tugging the Reds from the league bottom. The terms were not revealed, but the quick-moving general manager of the Reds conceded that "not more" than $15,000 a year would be a fair guess at the figure.

MacPhail revealed that he dickered for O'Farrell on the recommendation of Branch Rickey, Bill Terry, John McGraw and Rogers Hornsby.

Managing a ball club will be nothing new to O'Farrell, who replaces Donie Bush. He lost a pennant by only a game and a half while directing the Cardinals in 1927, and he has the benefit of experience under some of baseball's greatest—Bresnahan, McGraw, Hornsby, Evers, Killifer and others.

His appointment brings to nine the number of player-managers now working in the majors: Terry, of the Giants; Frisch, of the Cardinals; Grimm, of the Cubs; Wilson, of the Phillies; Cronin, of Washington; Cochrane, of Detroit; Hornsby, of the St. Louis Browns, and Fonseca, of the White Sox.

Started Career in 1915.

The new pilot has been in baseball since 1915, starting with Waukegan, and since spending his time mostly with the Cubs, the Giants, and Cardinals. Syl Johnson, native of Portland, Oreg., broke into the majors with Detroit's Tigers in 1921, and has been a Cardinal mainstay since 1926.

Announcement of today's deal marked the fifth trade MacPhail has engineered in a whirlwind campaign. "Red" Lucas and Wally Roettger he sent to Pittsburgh for Tony Piet and Adam Comorosky; Grantham to New York for Spencer; Jeffries and young Otto Bluege to Philadelphia for Mark Koenig, and bought Gordon Slade, young shortstop, outright from the Cards.

Alexandria Club To Fete Gridmen

Annual Banquet Is Slated Tomorrow Night.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Pep Club of Alexandria High School announced today that its annual banquet for the football team would be held Saturday night. Members of the team will receive their monograms. An evening of entertainment has been arranged by Miss Evelyn Knight, president of the club. Following refreshments a dance will be held in the school auditorium.

St. John's Prep, of Washington, will play Alexandria High School basketeers here tomorrow night. The Twins hold victories over Lee-Jackson and Oakton schools and have been victims of Eastern and Roosevelt. Coach Maurice Given's starting line-up for Friday night's tilt will be picked from the following players: Nugent, Chilcotte, Brewer, Embrey, Apperson, Penn, McMenamin and Lynch.

Hayman, of Central, Barred For Assaulting Tech Star

Following a meeting yesterday between Frank Daniels, principal of McKinley Tech High School; Harry A. Smith, principal of Central High School, and John Paul Collins, president and treasurer of the Inter-High Athletic Association, Mr. Smith announced that Hayman was barred from the team for the rest of the season.

It also was learned that officials handling any game would be instructed to stop the game should fighting and heckling occur.

The action was brought about because of the near riot which resulted following the Central-Western game Tuesday when Hayman assaulted John McLean, end of the Tech football team, and chipped McLean's tooth by a stinging right to the jaw. Further damage was averted by Hap Hardell, coach of the Tech football team.

The encounter occurred after the Central players had been heckled by McLean and his companions during the Central-Western game.

Odom Entry Breaks Fast, Runs Well

Crowning Glory Second, My Purchase Third in Feature Race.

Heiress Pays $133 to Show; Style Corner $133 to Win.

TROPICAL PARK, Jan. 11 (AP).—George M. Odom's Irene's Bob, always a good "first out" sprinter, displayed his usual brand of high speed in his local premiere this afternoon and led home a capacity field in the Daytona Purse of 6 furlongs. Fresh and fit, following a rest since the Maryland fall season, the gelded son of The Turk held on just long enough to nose out Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Crowning Glory. Mrs. M. Colford's My Purchase was third, two lengths away under Earl Porter. The time was 1:12 flat and the winner was the $4.20 choice.

Jimmy Hunter, the British Columbia youngster who was the reigning sensation recently at New Orleans, was a big aid in getting Irene's Bob first home. Jimmy had a fast breaker under him and took full advantage, swinging the gelding right to the front after a delay of nearly 7 minutes.

Crowning Glory Rushed.

Crowning Glory was rushed after the pacemaker by Bobby Jones. Sabula, another fast one, kept close up until the last furlong. Irene's Bob maintained a wide advantage, but Crowning Glory cut down the margin rapidly in the final drive and the favorite was all out to win. My Purchase was going strongly at the end.

Polisher stumbled at the start of the first race and form players did likewise as a result. The gelding made up ground to finish just out of the picture. Screen, with Coucci up, led all the way to score by two lengths at better than 4 to 1. Heiress, second by a head over Baby John, returned $133.10 for a $2 place ticket, and 96.80 for show. Had the filly won, she would have paid off at 182.75 to 1.

Style Corner Wins.

Anyone who missed out on Heiress in the first event had a chance to get rich on Style Corner in the second. This fellow, with Apprentice H. Hughes riding, won easily to pay $133.90 for $2. Hasty Peter, the hot favorite, chased the neglected victor for the entire six furlongs, but was beaten three full lengths. Over Shady was a like distance away from the place.

Hernando, apparently more at home over firmer footing, rewarded his many backers in the third race. Held at slightly better than 2 to 1, the son of Axenstein outfooted nine other platers all the way. Don't Blush lost ground turning for home but closed well, a length and a half behind and two spans in advance of The King.

Rego Is Victorious.

Hawk Moth, with Porter up, was the hope of form players in the fourth, but the B. B. Stable's filly was not equal to the task assigned her. She wound up third, Rego taking the purse at 9 to 1. Just American, beaten a length and a half, had a neck margin over Hawk Moth. Rego was on the front end from flagfall to finish, Hawk Moth tiring after forcing the pace.

Stone Martin headed the heavily-played James River in the sixth race, chiefly because Allen Tipton "hung it on" J. Ambrose in the riders' duel to the wire. Spartan Lady lost the place by four lengths. James River apparently was on his way to victory until Stone Martin, the one to force the pace, spurted in the final furlong. The latter paid $11.30.

When Earl Porter finished fourth on Bun D in the last contest, it marked the first day at the meeting the Geneva lad had gone winnerless. Silvio Coucci enjoyed his second success of the afternoon when Mareve lasted to win by a head from Babee at $12.10 for $2. Deferred was third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Leopold II, King of Belgium, ruled one nation as its king, and another as its owner. He was owner, in his own name, of the vast African empire of the Congo State. Leopold came into possession of the land—greater than France, Germany, Italy, Greece, Spain and the British Isles combined—by taking the explorer Stanley under his patronage.

He succeeded in 1885 in inducing the great powers of the world to acknowledge his ownership of the independent Congo Free State, as it was called. As its head and owner, Leopold developed the country, installed postoffices, and directed its management. Then came accusations that the natives were virtual slaves to the government, crushed by taxes, and that rights of foreign nations were not respected by the Belgian King's private country.

Leopold, under pressure of foreign nations, transferred his 900,000 square miles of private property to his own nation, and the Congo Free State became the Belgian Congo, a colonial possession of Belgium in 1908.

The transfer of this area has been called the greatest private real estate deal in the history of the world—a king deeding his property, which was more than 75 times larger than his own country, to his country.

Risky Miss Is Winner At Jefferson Park

New Orleans, Jan. 11 (AP).—T. C. Worden's, Risky, Miss., which had been in the habit of running either second or third, today whipped nine other 3-year-olds in a six-furlong allowance race at Jefferson Park.

Showing her usual speed away from the barrier, the daughter of Chance Play jumped into an early lead and never was headed as she bounded along in front under the guidance of Jockey Kacala. At the finish line she had increased her margin over the Campbell stable's Annarita to four lengths while A. G. Tarn's fabulous led the remainder of the field, several of which are well considered for the $2,500 Jefferson Park derby to be run January 20.

Will regarded at $4.20 for $2, Risky Miss stepped the three-quarters in 1:13 4-5 under the light weight of 104 pounds.

High School Highlights.

THE column drifts to football and the schedules which two of the local scholastic teams will be expected to wade through next season.

The Roughriding Roosevelts will play the identical clubs that graced their schedule last season, and save for the game with Charlottesville, all dates have been definitely set. The team opens with Emerson Institute, Friday, September 27, and then meets Swavely Prep of Manassas, here, the following Friday afternoon. On October 11, Gonzaga Prep will be played on the Gonzaga Field. Then follow the interhigh series games with Western, Central, Eastern and Roosevelt in order.

Gonzaga will meet Western High School on Thanksgiving Day, probably in the Western Stadium. Games with Tech and Eastern are pending for dates in November. The Purple eleven will clash with Washington-Lee High School of Ballston on the Virginians' new athletic field on September 27. The remainder of the schedule follows: Bullis School at home, October 4; Roosevelt at home, October 11; St. John's at home, October 18, and Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park, October 25. The November 9 date is still open.

Hap Hardell, football and track coach at McKinley Tech, has 100 candidates for the track team running through their paces daily, up and down the corridor in the gym wing of the building. Hap will have a track and weight outfit entered in the Catholic University indoor meet on February 24.

According to Hardell Bill Geiger, Tech guard, was the outstanding performer in his position on the football team the past season. He is a junior.

G. W. Frosh at Gonzaga.
Georgetown Prep at Friends.
Falls Church at Herndon.
Gaithersburg at Poolesville.
Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Rockville.
Takoma-Silver Spring at Sherwood.

Standards Challenge.

The Bureau of Standards basket ball team desires to schedule games for Wednesday and Friday. Call Manager William Walton, at Cleveland 1720, branch 104.

Cage League to Open; Dick Johnson Referee

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Appointment of Richard (Dick) Johnson of this city to serve as official referee in the Western Maryland Interscholastic Basket Ball League, which opens its season next week, was announced by Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany County public schools.

Johnson is a graduate of Allegany High School, this city, and Washington College, Chestertown, Md., where he captained the 1933 varsity basket ball team. He was a member of the University of Maryland's freshmen basket ball team in 1929, which included such well-known stars as Bozie Berger, Ronkin, Chalmers, May, Norris and Wilson.

Virginia Boxers Ready for Harvard

Three Vets, Five Newcomers Represent Cavaliers Tomorrow Night.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—Virginia boxers, defending champions of the Southern Conference, face a most severe test of skill when they meet the veteran ringmen of Harvard at 8 o'clock Saturday night in the Memorial gymnasium. It will be the opening match of the year for the Cavaliers, the second for the Crimson.

John LaRowe, who is coaching the Virginians for the thirteenth season, has just about decided upon the team to be used against Harvard. He will have three veterans of last season's title-winning combination, and five men who'll be competing in their first varsity engagement.

Archie Hahn, jr., of the university, son of the Cavalier track coach and trainer and conference bantamweight champion, will be in the 115-pound class, probably against a veteran who is several inches taller, Thomas Curtin, of Everett, Mass.

Rainey Another Veteran.

Another Virginia veteran, Gordon Rainey, of Oklahoma City, Okla., will be competing in the featherweight division, where he was runner-up in the conference tourney last winter. He has to trade blows with the Harvard captain, Marshall Lamb, of Rockland, Mass.

Coach LaRowe will have to pick a novice for the lightweight bout, where Bobby Goldstein, three times conference champion, will be sorely missed. Robert Logan, of Anchorage, Ky., will wear Virginia's Orange and Blue against Peter Ward, of Buffalo, N. Y., for the Crimson.

A man generally regarded as the most promising of all Virginia's newcomers will compete as a welterweight. He is Maynard Womer, of Johnston, Pa., who'll be against a Harvard man of real experience, Abraham Cone, of Dorchester, Mass.

Bill McClung, of Charlottesville, another newcomer on the varsity, probably will be Virginia's selection for the 115-pound class. He has to meet another one of Harvard's crack boxers, Philip Hines, of New York City.

Stuart Now 165-Pounder.

Harold Stuart, Virginia's captain, who was runner-up in the conference last year as junior middleweight, has moved up into the 165-pound division, where he'll be matched against either Richard Lawrence, of Groton, Mass., or Charles Blair, of Oceanport, N. J.

Virginia's light-heavyweight will be either Lyndon Lee, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., or Cullen Wilkin, of Salt Lake City, Utah, for the vacancy made by the loss of Lewis Reiss, twice champion in this class. William Smith, of New York, probably will be Harvard's entry.

Harvard's heavyweight, undefeated through three seasons, is Bradford Simmons, of Baltimore, Md. Facing him will be a Virginia novice, Eugene Hourihan, of Bayonne, N. J., new on the squad this year.

Eastern Downs G. U. Preps in Last Minute

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL yesterday defeated Georgetown Prep in the final minute of play at Garrett Park, 30 to 28.

After taking a substantial lead in the first period, the Preppers held it until the halfway mark in the final stanza. Two brilliant shots by Edelin, little guard of the Eastern team, brought the score to 28 to 26 in favor of the Garrett Parkers.

Davis, Eastern center, then knocked the ball through the hoop on the jump-up near the Hoyette basket, deadlocking the score at 28-all.

Hollidge's Free Tosses Win.

Hollidge, substitute for Edelin, won the game on two free throws. The score at the half showed Georgtown leading, 28 to 18. Maury Nee, of the Preppers, and Hollidge, of Eastern, both guards, divided the scoring honors with 10 points each.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Jan. 11.

Two-a-Day Bennings, as I'm being called in the press box, lived up to his reputation today. In fact, I'll take a 9-to-1 and a 5-to-1 shot out of seven races every day and let the rest of the world roll by. Rego and Stone Martin were the horses that I burdened with the Bennings stamp of approval and the charts have already told you the story of their triumphs. You know, I chased Mike, my No. 1 clocker, out of Camp Bennings for being a jinx and I have promised to place him in good standing the first time that I am shut-out. Mike, now at New Orleans, probably will start packing when he reads my line-up for tomorrow. However, I believe I have some good things. Time, alone, will tell. BILL.

First race—Patrice Runyan was a well-meant gathering of horse flesh the last time out. Gets in this test with only 100 pounds, and the rider, they tell me, will be Earl Porter. Looks like the spot. Barkantine was scratched yesterday and should go well here. Cabochon to complete the money picture.

Second race—Bickering might make it two in a row for Porter. The B. B. Stable colt packs much speed and the star rider knows how to make the most of it. The Bailiff appears able to hold the others safe. Mixed Party is the one that may stage a wake-up. Cheap but fit.

Third race—Prize Package is my longshot special in this sprint. This one has startled the clockers and tomorrow's the day. I advise a three-way backing. Bramble Broom and Davoc to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Longford ran several race in Maryland last fall that were encouraging and figured in a blanket finish that stamped him a real sprinting timber. I have waited patiently for the clockers to O. K. this one. I have the word. The consistent Happy Scot and the lightly-weighted Happy Anne to round out the eash circle.

Fifth race—Let's all bear down and try to chase Fairly Wild home ahead of this field. Of course, tomorrow might not be the day. If such is the case, all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't make this one win. However, the price is there and I look for a real effort. Fleet Flag and Phantom Legion for the place and show.

Sixth race—Just Fun, that trickster, failed to extend himself in the mud the other day. Gets in here with only a steadying impost and is going to do a lot of running. Trek and Bichloride to do the chief chasing.

Seventh race—Zembla is assigned 102 pounnds and can be mighty tough when thus rigged. Of course, she must take care of Rock Point if she is to get the main portion of the purse. Zombro, of $590 mutuel fame, might be the surprise of the outing.

Frederick Five Beaten By Hagerstown, 17-14

Frederick, Md., Jan. 11 (Spl.).—The Hagerstown Woodmen Basket Ball Team took the measure of the Frederick Celtics in a close game at the State armory, 17 to 14.

The former city champions took an early lead, but were unable to keep up the pace. Hagerstown evened the score near the end of the first half and went into the lead in the third quarter.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCREEN, $10.90, $5.90, $5.10; HEIRESS, $133.10, $96.80; BABY JOHN, $6.

SCREEN broke very fast, rushed into lead, saved ground and ran good race. HEIRESS, under good handling, closed with a rush and was second in fast stride. BABY JOHN, always close to pace, ran fair race. POLISHER stumbled at start, went up fast and finished gamely. LYNNEWOOD had plenty of speed, but quit badly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:33. Winner, Mrs. A. G. Marchant's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—STYLE CORNER, $133.90, $22.70, $7.50; HASTY PETER, $3.10, $2.70; OVER SHADY, $6.90.

STYLE CORNER broke very fast, ran into lead, made HASTY PETER stop and then drew away, winning nicely in hand. HASTY PETER was hard ridden all through stretch, but failed to make up any ground on the winner. OVER SHADY was well up from the start and had no excuse. SCOTCH SOLDIER ran an even race. DUNLIN'S LAD was driven hard from the start.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, easily. Went to post at 3:03. Off at 3:05. Winner, N. E. Stanton's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HERNANDO, $6.60, $4.50, $3.20; DON'T BLUSH, $9.60, $5.80; THE KING, $4.40.

HERNANDO, showing marked improvement over recent race, rushed into lead, displayed keen speed and drew away easily at end. DON'T BLUSH ran up very fast around turn, went wide entering stretch and finished fast. THE KING, slow to get into his stride, finished very fast. SUSPICIOUS showed good speed for 5 furlongs then tired. HEART BREAK suffered interference soon after the start. KIBITZER, outside all the way. MELOY tired.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37½. Off at 3:39. Winner, Albert Sabath's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REGO, $20, $7.80, $3.90; JUST AMERICAN, $13, $4.30; HAWK MOTH, $3.

REGO, going in best form, was sent to the front going into the first turn and perfectly rated along, drew out in stretch, but was doing his best to win. JUST AMERICAN moved up with a determined bid in stretch and outgamed HAWK MOTH for the place. HAWK MOTH was hustled along all the way and weakened in final sixteenth. BORDER PATROL closed a big gap. TAUNTON went well. APPOMATTOX had more early speed than usual and stopped badly. BLIND RAFTERY was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. The Daytona. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won all out; placing driving. Went to post at 4:07½. Off at 4:14. Winner, G. M. Odom's b. g. (5), by The Turk—Bob's Mary. Trained by W. J. McKnight. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Stocks Move Indecisively to High Ground

Utilities Lead Advances as Sales Volume Rises to 1,707,950 Shares.

New York, Jan. 11 (AP). — Stocks moved rather indecisively during most of today's session, but a late boost for utilities helped maintain a firm tone and the average net change was a small gain. Turnover increased to 1,707,950 shares, the best since December 27.

The stock list became a bit spotty after a fair opening, for traders hastened to take profits on yesterday's advance. At the same time, they appeared to be searching out new candidates for a rise and succeeded in finding several.

One of these was Nash Motors, which reached its best price since 1931. Alcohols and rails were well supported, but the best splurge came toward the close when light and power issues were brought forward.

Explanation of Trading.

The easiest explanation for their performance was that traders thought the rate outlook was more favorable as a result of the Administration's recently indicated views on sinking funds.

Realizing sales set back some stocks which had risen buoyantly yesterday. American Telephone gave up about a point and Case had a similar loss. Chrysler was heavy. General Motors and Du Pont also eased. Metals continued to lose ground, U. S. Smelting yielding around 3.

Consolidated Gas of New York rose 2 points in brisk trading. North American, Public Service of New Jersey, Standard Gas, Pacific Gas, Pacific Lighting and American Waterworks rallied 1 to 1½, and Peoples Gas added more than 4.

Utility Preferred Strong.

A number of utility preferreds also turned strong. Columbia Gas and American Power & Light improved less extensively. For rails, gains ran to fractions, with Santa Fe and Pennsylvania lifting almost a full point net.

Excess reserves of Federal Reserve member banks have topped $900,000,000, a record high. The accumulation of so huge a total has been facilitated by return flow of currency, which is said to be proceeding at a normal rate; this reservoir should prove useful when the Treasury launches its new financing program.

A new item appears this week in the Central Bank statements, namely, "Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Stock," the total for the 12 banks being 64,680,000; the New York bank's share is $21,265,000. Otherwise the statement shows a reduction of about $8,000,000 in open market bill purchases and a small decline in discounts. Currency circulation dropped $107,000,000.

Foreign Markets.

London, Jan. 11 (A.P.).—Cheered by trade reports and favorable Wall street advices, prices on the stock exchange were firm and active. Gilt-edged securities continued as the feature of the market, supplemented by support of industrials and transatlantic issues. Kaffirs and Argentine rails eased. The market closed firm.

Paris—Wall street's improvement helped to give the bourse a find tone, although trading was quiet. Rentes declined slightly pending the outcome of cabinet difficulties. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Firmness in the bond section stimulated prices on the boerse for a time. However, support dwindled later and quotations sagged, the market closing without recovery.

Robey's Review

Declining Government Bond Market in Face of Treasury Support Should Cause Concern Among Those in Charge of Our Financial Policies.

By Ralph West Robey.

Day by day since the budget message of the President the price of United States Government bonds has been declining. Such decline, too, has been in the face of substantial support of the market by the Government. The drop has not been large and in no sense has been a wide open break. Nevertheless, the persistency with which it has continued should cause those in charge of our National finances to be unusually careful in the making of plans for unnecessary expenditures.

By and large it appears to be the opinion that there will not be any great drop in Government bonds at this time. Various factors enter into this conclusion. Most important from an immediate point of view is the fact that the Government will stay in the market, taking offerings to a sufficient extent to hold values relatively steady. No one can say with positiveness how much is available in the way of Governmental funds for such support but unquestionably it is large. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has scores of millions of dollars that may, and probably will, be used for this purpose. In addition, practically the entire sinking fund allotment still is available.

Support Does Not Solve Basic Problem Involved.

At best, however, it must be recognized that such artificial support does not solve the problem of the Government straining its credit. Prices as quoted in the market may be held up, but once the support is withdrawn there is certain to be a decline unless the underlying financial program has been straightened out. Granting that the financial program is not going to be changed, there is, accordingly, a real question as to whether the Government is justified at all in coming to the support of the market. If it simply were meeting a temporary shock the issue would be different. At present, however, the weakness of the market is not the result of some temporary factor but of a policy that is announced to extend over a considerable period.

In a sense the current problem is somewhat the same as that faced by private investment houses when they issue securities. It has been their habit in the past when putting out a new issue to "peg" the market until the public demand would carry the load by itself. The justification for such a practice is that it prevents an unnecessary decline in the value of the securities while the market is becoming "seasoned." Underlying this justification is the requisite that once the market is "seasoned" the securities will hold up of their own accord.

"Seasoning" Does Not Apply to Governments.

It is quite obvious that in the case of Government securities this argument does not apply. The market for them is as fully seasoned as it ever will be. To the extent that the price is held at artificial levels, therefore, or, that is, at a level which the interest rate on the securities and credit standing of the United States Government do not justify, the investor will lose. This is just as true in the case of United States Government obligations as it was in the case of the private obligations put out before 1929 that took such a heavy toll from private investors as soon as the underwriters "pulled the plug."

The answer made to such conclusions is that the United States Government has the power more or less permanently to support the market for its securities. To a degree this is true. By forcing the Federal Reserve banks to buy the obligations and by shortening the maturity of Government borrowing, prices can be held close to par. A Government which is following financial policies that necessitate such artificial methods for keeping up the price of its obligations, nevertheless, is inviting trouble. A more prudent management of our finances would dictate an overhauling of our financial policies as soon as such artificial support in the Government bond market becomes necessary.

Curb's Prices Driven Higher Under Buying

New York, Jan. 11 (AP).—A substantial demand in the last hour for utilities sent the Curb market to a higher close today. A number of good gains were also recorded by alcohols, oils, metals and industrial specialties.

The earlier session was marked by some irregularity, but this was largely erased. Among the power shares Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric advanced 1 and 2 points, respectively. The preferred shares of the former got up 2 to 4. Commonwealth Edison rose 5½, while Columbia Gas & Electric preferred closed at 80, up 8 points.

Lake Shore Mines and Newmont lagged but International Mining and Consolidated Mining gained about 2 each. Mead Johnson finished nearly 6 points higher in a light turnover. Issues firming around 1 to 2 points included Canadian Industrial Alcohol B, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Jones & Laughlin Steel, Humble Oil, General Tire & Rubber, Insurance Company of North America, and Safety Car Heating.

(Associated Press.)

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers held by New York City reporting banks amounted to $746,000,000 during the week ended January 10, representing a decrease of $91,000,000 for the week.

The loans for the comparable week of last year were $381,000,000.

The Federal Reserve Board's detailed description of the distribution of the loans over the three weeks dealt with follows:

Stocks — Trading was indecisive for some time, but the market moved forward and closed fourtenths up. Utilities led the advance. Sales volume increased to 1,707,950 shares.

Bonds — Ailing Federal loans turned to climbing and secondary bonds scored their best gains since last November. Advances averaged nine-tenths of a point. Sales declined in volume to $19,917,000.

Curb—Substantial buying in the last hour sent curb prices to higher ground. Alcohols, oils and metals made good gains. Sales volume increased to 385,000 shares.

Wheat — Disappointment over lighter farm reserve supplies of wheat caused prices to sink. Other grains joined the declines. Houses that bought heavily on Wednesday became the chief sellers. May Wheat sold at 85⅜; July, at 83⅜.

Cotton—Prices rose again. The highest prices since last August were recorded, but reactions followed under realizing and liquidation. March sold at 10.89. The general market advanced 4 to 8 points. January sold at 10.82.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed quiet, 3 higher to 2 lower. January sold at 8.85, March, at 9.05 to 9.07.

Gold—Bar gold in the United States was unchanged at $34.06 per ounce. It was unchanged also in London, at 127 shillings and 1 penny.

Dollar—The United States dollar advanced slightly on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.08½ to the English pound; 6.10½ cents to the French franc, and 37.05 cents to the German mark.

Wheat Reacts On Lighter Cut In Farm Supply

Wednesday Buyers Become Chief Sellers; Other Grains Decline.

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP).—Disappointment that the Government estimate on farm reserve supplies of wheat had proved less bullish than generally expected, led to setbacks in grain values today.

Although the official figures showed farm stocks of wheat to be only 194,000,000 bushels at present, against 273,000,000 a year ago, the new total was 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels in excess of private estimates.

A bearish construction placed on crop forecasts from Russia tended also to pull the wheat market lower.

Wheat Closes Unstable.

Wheat closed unstable near the day's bottom level, 1 to 1¼ cents under yesterday's finish; corn, ½ to ¾ down; oats, ⅜ to ½ off, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to 7 cents gain.

The fact that bullish aspects of the official report on farm reserves had been largely discounted in advance did much to explain today's comparative dearth of aggressive new speculative demand. Except at the start, the report had little effect as a stimulus to price upturns, and this made it difficult for the market to absorb offerings from holders attempting to collect profits. Under such circumstances, it was in vain for the time being that bulls pointed out 760,000,000 bushels drop shown officially in farm reserve stocks of the three major grains.

Former Buyers Sell.

Houses that yesterday were conspicious on the buying side of the wheat market became the chief sellers today, and at no time were price rallies impressive. Liverpool reported that selling believed to be for Argentine account had checked an upward tendency of wheat values abroad.

Extremely bearish crop estimates from Russia were given more than usual attention despite assertions in some quarters that the estimates appeared inconsistent with poor quality of arrivals of Russian wheat in Great Britain, poor quality seldom meaning a big crop.

Corn and oats followed the action of wheat. Country offerings of corn to arrive were increased, the total being the largest for one day in about a month. Eastern shipping demand for corn was less active.

Increasing stocks of lard, with downturns of hog values and of cereals, made the provision market average lower.

Brazil Decree Opens Water Meter Market

An opportunity for the sale of American water meters in Brazil has just arisen as a result of a presidential decree providing for the installation of water meters in the Federal District of Rio de Janeiro, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Assistant Commercial Attache A. Ogden Pierrot.

Very few meters are at present installed in the Brazilian capital, a fact generally considered locally as one of the reasons for the excessive use of water and resulting water shortages.

The purpose of the new law, it is pointed out, is to require the installation of meters by the water department of Rio de Janeiro, which is a Federal government agency. The meters to be used must be approved by the ministry of education and public health. A tolerance up to 5 per cent will be permitted in the case of the meters to be installed.

Regulations are to be issued governing the details of the installation of the meters and establishment of the rates at which the government will collect rental on them, as well as the rate of the water tax.

WORK—EARN MONEY
Doubting Thomases pass on. Seventeen years of successful training and in placing its graduates in select positions is REAL PROOF that the best training PAYS in the end. It is NOT how long you attend school, but what you actually learn and can demonstrate. Usually the dumbest are in school longest.
EVERY STUDENT at Boyd's is treated as an individual and is advanced on merit. ACTUAL RECORDS: A student in school 3 months, without previous training in stenography, placed $25 week. Another, 5 months night school, placed $1,500 year. Another, 2 months, without previous training, placed $22.50 week. Scores of similar records. These are exceptions, yet actual records, and are matchless in this city. New and Review Courses 2-9 months. Position guaranteed graduates. New classes now starting.

Faded Hopes.

Some five or six brief years ago, when I surveyed the fighters' game, I thought some men destined to grow and gather forty kinds of fame. Some five or six of them there were, whose worth I paused to celebrate; I thought they'd surely make a stir and mingle with the laureled great. Their pictures, in the public prints, were published often, by their leave, and in the sport news there were hints of mighty things they would achieve. Today I read a sporting sheet, a relic left from '28; and there I saw a list complete of all those hopes, the would-be great. And Johnny Risko of them all alone is at the same old stand; the rest are gone beyond recall, their names and all their dreams are canned. They'll never grasp the million bucks that made the Dempsey-Tunney roll; perhaps they're busy driving trucks or shoveling the winters' coal. I hope they've found some honest toil, so they in season may forget the dreams that wilt, the dreams that spoil, the dreams that languish in the wet. One fighter reaches high estate and garners kopecks by the ton; the life he leads is simply great, he has all sorts of wholesome fun. But where one fighter basks at ease and grabs the shilling and the pound, a thousand fighters lack the cheese that makes the inner wheels go round. The fighting prospects of today forgotten are a fortnight hence; and all their high hopes drift away like loose weeds blown against a fence.

The Gumps — Come Get It While It's Hot

WELL — THERE THEY GO — UNCLE BIM AND HIS BRIDE-TO-BE — AND THEY SAY SHE TRAVELS ON HER GOOD LOOKS —
IF THAT IS THE CASE THAT ACCOUNTS FOR HER NEVER BEING FOUND FAR AWAY FROM HOME — WELL, POOR BIM — I WISH YOU LOADS OF HAPPINESS AND JOY — AND I'M GLAD THAT YOU CAN CONTINUE TO BE YOUNG IN SPIRIT AND THAT YOUR HEART IS NOT FROZEN —
THAT WOULD BE TOO BAD — A FROZEN HEART IS ABOUT ON AN EQUAL WITH A FROZEN POTATO — AND ONE IS WORTH JUST ABOUT AS MUCH AS THE OTHER WHEN THEY ARE THAWED OUT —
